American Finds Mysterious Mary of Dow Party

IDENTIFIED BY RAAB GIRL AT HOME

Located by Means of Pet Dog Taken to the Revels at Melrose House

By BERT FORD.

Copyright, 1922, by the Boston American.

The mysterious couple known as "Mary and John," who were guests at the Saturday night revel at the home of Mrs. Kate Dow in Melrose, when twenty-year-old Mrs. Mary O'Leary Raab was attacked, were today identified by the Boston American as Mr. and Mrs. John A McIntire of No 263 Highland avenue, Somerville.

They were located by means of Queenie," their pet Boston terrier, which they brought to the party. They were accompanied by another Somerville couple, the male member of which is also known.

As soon as Mr. and Mrs. McIntire were found Mrs. Raab was taken to Somerville and she positively identified both as having attended the festivities which broke up in a disturbance in the wee hours of the Sabbath.

"That's John and Mary," exclaimed Mrs. Raab. "I'll never forget Mary if I should live 100 years."

Mrs. Raab, accompanied by one of her counsel, Attorney William H.

Declares Her Wedded Life Was a Horror

Mrs. Gilbert's Husband, a Physician, in Jail for Failure to Pay Alimony

'MAD' HEIRESS FLEECED

Her husband, Dr. Charles H. Gilbert, is in the East Cambridge jail for failure to pay her $12 weekly alimony. Mrs. Gilbert says she paid his expenses while he was studying to become a physician. After they were married she says he ran through her money in three years.

MRS. LOUISE V. GILBERT.

FAILS ALIMONY; DR. GILBERT IS SENT TO JAIL

Mrs. Louise V. Gilbert of Water-town, whose ex-husband, Dr. Charles H. Gilbert, is in the jail at East Cambridge for failure to pay alimony to her, declared today that her married life was a horror.

The Gilberts were married June 11, 1911. Gilbert was a friend of the physician who treated Mrs. Gilbert for an illness at the time. During her convalescence he courted her, and upon her recovery they were married. She then had a considerable fortune.

"I paid his expenses while he studied medicine," she said. "He ran through my money in three years.

"When I argued with him he would beat me.

"Were it not for my loyal friends, who stood by me and helped me, I do not know how I could ever have stood it."

TEACHER'S HOME IS ATTACKED

Believe Junior Klan Responsible for Second Outbreak of Kind in Lynn

Luther Atwood, teacher of Greek and Latin in Lynn Classical High School, was reading in his study at his home, No. 8 Sagamore street, Lynn.

Crash!

A stone, size of a man's fist, came through one of the window panes and landed at Mr. Atwood's feet.

Lynn police made investigation today whether the stone-throwing was the work of the so-called junior Ku Klux Klan, said to have been organized among high school pupils.

Mr. Atwood is regarded by the pupils as a strict disciplinarian.

There was no note attached to the stone, however, nor have the police any evidence that high school pupils were concerned in the mischief.

A stone was thrown through the open door of Max Schwartz's tailor shop in Lawton street, Lynn, Wednesday. It bore a note bidding Schwartz return to Russia and signed "Junior Ku Klux Klan."

This led to a report of a band of this kind among high school pupils.

DE VALERA ESCAPES IN BIG RAID

Mary MacSwiney and General O'Malley, the Latter Wounded, Captured

Dublin, Nov. 4—It is reported Eamon de Valera was injured by jumping from a window in his escape from the raided home of Mrs. Humphries.

Dublin, Nov. 4 (By the Associated Press)—Miss Mary MacSwiney was among several persons arrested in the home of Mrs. Humphries in Aylesbury road here after a pitched battle between the occupants and National army troops.

The latter were presumably seeking to arrest Eamon De Valera, reported to be hiding in this city.

The search failed to reveal the Republican leader. He is believed to have escaped from the house last night.

Commandant-General Ernest O'Malley, one of the most active of the Republican leaders, was dangerously wounded and arrested.

Madame O'Rahilly, widow of The O'Rahilly, who was killed in the 1916 insurrection, was also wounded.

Madame O'Rahilly, widow of the owner of the house and niece of O'Rahilly, was slightly wounded. Mrs. Humphries was arrested.

U. S. and Britain to Cancel Apologies Instead of Debts

Washington, Nov. 4.—Instead of cancellation of indebtedness, Great Britain and the United States will agree to a "cancellation of apologies."

The United States has settled Great Britain by overzealousness of prohibition ships in seizing the steamer Emerald outside the three-mile limit.

Great Britain must apologize to the United States for its collision of the credentials of two American consular officers at Newcastle.

An exchange of "regrets" it was said today probably would close the incident.

KILLED BY STILL HE RAN TO PAY FOR DIVORCE

Lawrence, Nov. 4.—William Guriski set up an illicit still. He sorely needed money for a divorce. He wished to be free from his wife. He is. He was killed by alcohol fumes from his still.

Guriski had his still on the first floor of the three-tenement house at No. 578 South Union street. His body was found on the rear step.

There was suspicion of foul play until Medical Examiner Dow found the still was the cause.

The gas bills for the first floor were made out to Peter Hersey, of the top floor, where Guriski lodged. In a strict court today Hersey was accused of being implicated in the illicit distilling.

Then Mrs. Hersey tried to clear her husband by explaining that Guriski had let her wished to get a divorce but had first to raise money to pay lawyer's retaining fee, so he proposed to operate a still on the first floor. But he would like the Herseys to pay the rent and gas bills, for which he would supply the money. Hence the gas bills, Mrs. Hersey maintained, were made out to her husband, but the still was Guriski's affair.

The court held Hersey was implicated and fined him him. $100.

Guriski leaves a wife and four children.

AUTO HITS TROLLEY, 5 HURT

Head-On Crash in Somerville Follows an Attempt to Pass to Left

Five men were injured, four seriously, when an automobile crashed head-on into a northbound semi-convertible trolley car on Medford street near Glenwood road, Somerville, today.

The injured:

Wilbur H. Buck of No. 10 School street, Woburn, driver of the auto.

Carl H. Buck, No. 3 Newbridge avenue, Woburn.

Sidney Whittaker, No. 118 Josephine street, West Somerville.

Brady E. Sherman, No. 667 Main street, Woburn.

According to the police the auto had been trailing a south-bound street car and suddenly pulled to the left, apparently with intent to pass it, and slammed into the northbound car No. 5,156, of which the motorman is John Skaling and the conductor Michael McGuire.

The auto was wrecked, the radiator telescoping. Wilbur Buck was the most seriously injured and with Carl Buck, Stacey and Whittaker was taken to the Somerville Hospital. Sherman, although badly cut and bruised, did not go to the hospital.

RICH GIRL HIDDEN IN ASYLUM

Uncle of Dorothy Gordon Seeks to Oust Winchester Man as Her Guardian

By HAROLD R. HALL.

William F. Jardine, who placed his ward, Dorothy Gordon, in an insane asylum shortly after she fell heir to an estate of more than $100,000, made himself president of the Gordon Supply Company, Albany street, which was formerly the property of the girl's father.

In addition to this, Mrs. Katherine Hughes, the girl's aunt, receives a salary of $5,000 yearly from the company, although she does nothing at all about the business. Her sons, Melville and Clarence, are now drawing about $10,000 a year apiece from the company, although before Jardine took the company over they were getting $60 a week.

These points came out while Jardine was testifying before G. A. A. Perry, an auditor, who is hearing the legal battle which is being waged by John D. Gardiner of Baldwin, Long Island, an uncle of Dorothy, for the removal of Jardine as the girl's guardian.

Jardine also admitted that, although his ward is confined in an insane asylum, he is drawing $50 a month from her estate for a room for the girl in his own house in

Before a packed house, John F. Fitzgerald today made answer to Governor Cox's charges against him at a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall. Marlin, Texas., Nov. 4.—Two men were killed and a score of persons injured when a northbound Houston and Texas Central train crashed into a Waco-Marlin train at Rymond, Tex., today, according to a report received here. One of the dead was reported to be R. N. Willet of New York. The other was unidentified. The engine ploughed into a sleeper near the end of the waiting train.

HEIRESS FLEECED WHILE BEING HELD AS PATIENT IN ASYLUM

Winchester—a room that she has never even been in.

Jardine testified that he has been charging the girl's estate $50 a month for a room for the girl for three years. Since March, 1921, the girl, he admits, has been in the McLean Asylum at Waverley. He also admitted that for practically two years previous to her confinement to the asylum the girl had been away to a boarding school and a Summer camp.

NEVER BEEN IN ROOM.

Jardine also brought out the fact in his testimony that he pays only $65 a month for his entire house rent. He collects $50 a month of this sum from the girl's estate, he admitted, for the room that the girl does not use. He admitted that the girl had never been inside the room in his home in Winchester for which she pays $50 a month rent now.

The room for which the girl is paying rent is situated on the third floor of the Jardine home, Jardine testified, and is used as a guest room when the other rooms are occupied. Attorney John L. Sheehan for Mr. Baldwin questioned Jardine closely in an attempt to force him to admit that the room is in the attic of the house. Jardine said there is no attic, but that the room is on the third floor.

According to the testimony of Jardine, his brother at No. 1054 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, before moving to his present home at No. 219 Washington street, Winchester. He admitted that while there Dorothy had a room that opened on an airshaft of the apartment house.

Jardine also testified that he had not notified the relatives of Miss Gordon when he placed her in the asylum at Waverly I. 1916. He said that he had told inquirers that the girl was at school. He testified that he had given orders forbidding the girl's uncle from seeing her while she was at the asylum.

ROMANCE BLIGHTED.

The life of the Gordon girl reads like a novel. First Dorothy's father died after he had become wealthy. Then her mother was killed in an automobile accident on August 30, 1916.

Her lifeless body was found on the street at Nantasket Beach. An investigation resulted in the official announcement that the woman had met death by falling from an automobile.

Shortly afterwards application was made for the appointment of Jardine as guardian. It was opposed by the uncle, John Gardiner. Jardine was appointed.

Dorothy attended the fashionable Mt. Ida School at Newton. She moved in the best circles as became a wealthy young heiress. Then, according to the testimony of her uncle before the auditor in the Suffolk Superior Court, the girl was sent to the Hillside School at South Norwalk, Ct.

According to Jardine's testimony, the girl returned to his home in Cambridge in December, 1916. She was suffering from a nervous trouble, he testified. In a few days from the time she arrived from the fashionable Connecticut school she was taken to the McLean Asylum, where, according to Jardine's testimony she was shut off from her relatives.

Jardine stated that he and his wife, Mrs. Lena Jardine, visited her weekly. Jardine admitted that he did not even tell the Probate Court that the girl was in the asylum.

The girl, according to the testimony of her guardian, was released from the asylum "about Labor Day" of 1918. The next chapter in the girl's unusual career, as brought out by the testimony of Jardine and a love affair with a Tech student. This blossomed into a full-fledged romance and the girl went to her guardian and told him that she wanted to marry the student.

Here Jardine testified that he sent the girl to the very exclusive House-in-the-Pines School at Norton, Mass. There she mingled with an exclusive set. The girl, who had been behind the walls of an insane asylum, was one of the many wealthy girls who were seen daily riding about Norton on spirited horses.

The final chapter came in March, 1921, according to the testimony of Jardine, when the girl came home for the Spring holidays. She had now become of age, he admitted. But in a short time after she reached home from the school in Norton, Jardine stated he himself took her to the McLean Asylum again. She has been there ever since.

Jardine mentioned by Attorney Sheehan admitted that the girl always seemed improved in her condition when she was away from the Jardine home. He stated that he was in charge of her, but admitted that his wife, Mrs. Lena Jardine, had more personal contact with her than he.

The legal battle being waged by the uncle of the girl for the ousting of Jardine and the appointment of another in his place will be continued in the Suffolk Superior Court next Wednesday before the auditor.

To the Boston American reporter Gardiner declared that he is not asking that he be made guardian of his niece. "All I want is to have someone other than Jardine in that position."

IDENTIFIES MARY IN REVELS AT DOWS'

Powers, Jr., and a Boston American reporter, confronted Mr. and Mrs. McIntire in front of their home as they returned from the theatre, a block below the McIntire home. Earlier in the evening Mrs. Raab had identified the McIntire automobile, an Auburn 8, with registration plate No. 227,739.

While driving along Highland avenue she was attracted by a car standing beside the curb more than the location of which had not been pointed out to her. There were several other cars parked along the street, but this particular one looked so familiar to Mrs. Raab that she asked to be driven back to look at it.

ALSO IDENTIFIES CAR.

"That's the car I saw standing in front of the Dow home a week ago last Sunday when I was looking," said Mrs. Raab, after peering at the front number plate. "At the time I noticed that the plate was fastened to the centre of the engine hood and those are the numbers."

The registration numbers of the McIntire automobile procured earlier in the day by the Boston American were consulted without Mrs. Raab's knowledge and they compared with the car which she had sighted in semi-darkness while under way.

CONFONTS COUPLE.

This fact was withheld from Mrs. Raab until after she had confronted Mr. and Mrs. McIntire on the street and later saw them talking with the proprietor of the drug store under their flat. McIntire, a slender young man about thirty years of age, recently sold this drug store to the present owner.

His wife used to assist him as clerk. He is now a real estate agent. The other couple who attended the Dow party with them are neighbors who live close by in the center of Somerville, not far from Teele square.

REMEMBERED AUTO NUMBER.

"A quiver ran through my body when I saw them," said Mrs. Raab. "Why did I happen to look at the number of the car standing in front of the Dow home that Sunday morning? Well it was to find out where those persons lived.

"I had been forced to flee into the street hatless and coatless, dress torn and dripping from the water that had been flung at me. My first impulse was to get a record of their car, but I had no pencil and I could only remember the first number. But I recalled peculiarities about the car.

"I recalled that in looking for the number plate it was deep in between the lights, that the main headlights were out and that only the right of the two smaller headlights were on, just as tonight.

TERRIER AT PARTY.

"The night of the party at the Dow home the two Somerville couples brought a Boston terrier with them. The girl called Mary told me it was a registered dog, and that they got $75 for puppies some months earlier.

"The man John showed me the fine points of the dog and how to tell by its ears and the shape of its head, etc. After the guests got drinking, the dog was locked in a closet because it barked so. The dog's name was Queenie."

REPORT BARES EXTORTION BY BONDSMEN

Disclosures revealing the mulcting of thousands from both the county and individuals are expected in the report of Inspector Harry Pierce on the methods of bail commissioners and professional bondsmen.

While the inspector was completing his report today, George C. Wilson, colored, of No. 22 Ball street, Roxbury, was rebuked in Municipal Court by Judge Duff for charging an excessive rate for bailing a woman in jail on a drunk charge.

Wilson put up surety of $50 and for this demanded a fee of $10, whereas the normal rate is 5 per cent. and on $50 is $2.50.

Today, as Court Officer Patrick Halloran was obtaining information from the prisoner, she told him how Wilson had forced her to pay $10, so he informed Chief Court Officer Peter Hanley, who brought Wilson before Judge Duff.

"Don't you think th's an exorbitant amount?" asked the court.

"I do," was the surprising answer. "After thinking it over I decided I had charged too much and intended to give part back."

"You better give Mr. Healey $6 now to return," said the court.

WET DAY SENDS SOLDIER TO JAIL

"Con" Murphy, private at Fort Banks, explained in Chelsea court it was his first "liberty" in six months, that he christened it and that's how it must have happened.

But he was fined $25 for assault, and lacking the money was sent to jail.

Murphy had accosted eight-year-old Ethel Carafa with "Come here little girl, I want to talk to you," and took her by the collar.

Her father, William C. Carafa came out and invited Murphy inside his undertaking shop at No. 829 Broadway to "talk it over" and telephoned the police. Murphy went at the father. The police arrived in the midst of the row. Murphy was found not guilty of a second technical charge of assault on the little girl.

FLORIDA'S BEST FACES HARVARD

dog and the Brown University scrappers would do.

Many Boston University supporters journeyed up to Hanover, N. H., for the game with Dartmouth, the last "home" contest on the Green schedule.

The Harvard-Florida game is one of three intersectional contests in the East. Pennsylvania, revived by brilliant victory over the Navy last week, meets Alabama at Philadelphia, while the strong Nebraska eleven is on from the West to tackle Syracuse, which held Penn State to a tie a week ago.

Sharing interest with the intersectional contests is a game at the Polo Grounds, New York, between Lafayette and Washington & Jefferson, two elevens undefeated since late in the Fall of 1920.

This game is called the nearest approach to one, between two all-American elevens.

John Harvard figures on tearing the hides off the Florida "Alligators" in the Stadium. But Coach Kline of Florida allows that this 1922 eleven, the first one U. of F. has sent up here, is the best football outfit Florida ever had.

Conspicuous among "those present" with the Florida delegation are Dr. A. C. Murphree, president of the peninsular university, and "Tootsie," the hard-shelled alligator mascot.

Harvard looks for a kicking game from Florida. Ray Dixon, the 200-pound Alligator fullback, is reputed to use his kicking boot like a golf club, hooking or slicing or kicking straight ahead at will.

Special trains left Providence in the morning for New Haven, bearing hopeful Bulins. New Haven dispatches today said that there was no Brown money in sight and that Tad Jones never had his players in such fine fettle as they were while waiting to crash into the visitors from Providence at 2:30.

Tad rather figures that Brown will depend much during the week on passes. On that "dope" the Yale Bulldog has been putting in considerable time during the week on defence against that particular manoeuvre.

Other outstanding contests on the schedule will bring Columbia and Cornell together at Ithaca, Princeton and Swarthmore at Princeton, Holy Cross and Georgetown at Georgetown, Union and Hobart at Geneva, N. Y., and Lehigh and Colgate at Binghamton, N. Y.

COX IS FLAYED IN LETTER TO DEPOSITORS

In an open letter sent to hundreds of depositors in closed Boston trust companies by the Depositors' Protective Committee, Governor Cox is criticised for his failure to help the depositors.

The letter states that Governor Cox turned a deaf ear to all pleas for aid. He is charged with permitting millions of dollars of deposits to lie idle in banks for the use of big bankers.

The letter says, in part:

"Our committee has worked to prevent our money from being squandered by the bank commissioner through liquidation expenses and sacrifice of the assets of the banks.

"We have begged Governor Cox to hasten the payment of our money. The Governor has persistently turned a deaf ear to our appeals. While we have been begging for our money, millions of dollars of our deposits have been lying idle in favored banks for the use of big bankers instead of being distributed to their rightful owners.

"It is discouraging enough to have been forced to wait for a part of our money, without being obliged to lose the balance. Had we received the help promised to our committee by Governor Cox, there would have been no need of this communication.

"There is one way left and that is to elect a Governor who will have respect for the property rights of the people in general, and who will not be a party to sacrificing the interests of the many for the benefit of the favored few.

"Governor Cox has been tried and found wanting. We must forget political partisanship and co-operate to defeat the man who has disdained us, inflicted severe hardships upon us and caused us many heartaches."

MESSAGE SENT ITALIANS HERE BY MUSSOLINI

Rome, Nov. 4 (By the Associated Press).—Premier Mussolini sent today through the Associated Press the following message to the Italians in America:

"On the fourth anniversary of our victory it gives me pleasure to send a message of good wishes to all Italians living in North America. As the youths who returned victorious from the trenches bound themselves together, so must you join in the name of Italy expressing all your strength and making felt the virtues of the Italian people.

"Thus united, you will co-operate with greater alacrity, not only in your own prosperity, but in that of the noble nation extending you hospitality, of which you are not a negligible element of value.

"VIVA ITALIA, VIVA AMERICA."

King Victor Emmanuel, Premier Mussolini and his ministers and the diplomatic corps attended a solemn mass of thanksgiving in the Church of Santa Maria Degli Angeli. They drove to the tomb of the unknown soldier, and knelt there a moment while bells pealed in all the churches.

It was the first time the day of victory had been officially and publicly celebrated.

Mussolini Plans to Change Election Law

Rome, Nov. 4. (By the Associated Press).—The first bill to be presented by Premier Mussolini at the reopening of Parliament November 16 will be the budget. The next measures will be for modification of the electoral law, giving the government freedom to have general elections whenever it thinks best.

Signor de Vecchi, under secretary of pensions, has expressed the intention of presenting a bill modifying the pensions law, excluding deserters from its benefits.

CHARGE TEACHER FLOGGED PUPIL

Westfield, Nov. 4.—Declaring that a teacher at the Ashley street school flogged him with a length of rubber hose so severely that a physician had to be called, fifteen-year-old Joseph Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sullivan of No. 14 Taylor avenue, has not attended the school since last Monday.

According to the lad's story, Miss Lima Gold, principal of the school administered the flogging while the janitor held him. The blows were administered, he says, on his back and arms. He was whipped for being tardy.

When he got home Monday night he told his parents of the affair, and Dr. William L. Connery was called. Dr. Connery said that he treated the boy, and that the black and blue spots on his body were so sore he advised him not to go to school for a few days.

FIRST WHITE MAN HELD IN PEONAGE

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 4.—The first charge by a white man in the history of the South that he had been held in peonage by another white man came to light in investigation of the murder of James Langdon, a mail carrier. Five men are under arrest, including John Waller, farmer. When officers searched his place they found Tony Thompson, fifty-nine years old, dressed in ragged clothing, who told them that he had been kept in servitude for eight years. Officers believe Langdon was murdered by Ku Klux Klan.

MUST PAY BACK $18,000 OR GO TO JAIL

Attorney Milton A. Stone, a State street attorney, and Clyde Colt, real estate investment broker in New York, have been given the alternative by Federal Judge Morton of making restitution of about $18,000 to investors of the North Shore Fish Corporation or taking a sentence. Both men recently pleaded nolo to a Federal indictment which charged them with conspiracy in using the mails in a scheme to defraud in connection with promotion of stock sales in the corporation.

Milton A. Stone.

Stone denied that he had anything to do with the circulars sent out and which the government claimed contained false and misleading statements. It appears that the fish corporation was organized to take over the assets of the Maine Fisheries Company, which was in bankruptcy, and title to the assets was not in possession of the new corporation, although circulars sent to prospective investors stated that such was the case.

In commenting on the case Judge Morton said: "The circulars are inexcusable, and the scheme was the most stupid that I ever saw. I will give those defendants reasonable time to make restitution."

HITS AT EMBARGO ON THE NEW HAVEN

Robert Henderson, secretary-treasurer of the New Haven System Federation, No. 17, has issued a statement in which he asserts that the present freight embargo could have been averted. Mr. Henderson says the embargo would not have been necessary if the railroad had followed his suggestion of meeting representatives of the striking shopmen, which was contained in a letter he sent to General Manager C. L. Bardo on September 23.

NON-STOP AIR CRAFT FORCED TO LAND

Indianapolis, Nov. 4.—Lieutenants Oakley Kelly and John Macready, attempting a transcontinental air flight, were forced down at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near here, at 9:15 today. A cracked water jacket is said to have forced the aviators to descend.

The machine carried the greatest load ever taken up by a single-motored aircraft, 10,800 pounds.

Aviators Tell How Mishap Occurred

By International News Service.

Indianapolis, Nov. 4.—A water leak caused the landing of the T-2 shortly after 9 a. m. Efforts to fix the trouble proved futile.

"We covered 2,060 miles in twenty-five hours," Lieutenant Oakley Kelly declared. "Our trouble developed after we had covered about 400 miles. We expect to take off again for Mineola as soon as the trouble is repaired.

"It became apparent we would have to land about a hundred miles before we reached for Benjamin Harrison."

Neither Lieutenant Kelly nor Lieutenant MacReady had a moment's relaxation since the beginning of the trip.

With the hardest part of the trip successfully negotiated as far as atmospheric conditions were concerned the airmen appeared chagrined.

"We wasted only about one hour's time," Lieutenant Kelly said. "We made the trip without hardly deviating from our course.

The last hour of the flight accomplished the least in the way of distance. The aviators left Terre Haute at 7:52 a. m. and did not reach Fort Benjamin Harrison until after 9 o'clock.

RABBI WISE SEES DARK OUTLOOK AHEAD

"Moral flabbiness, spiritual slackness, hatred and despondency describes the situation among the rank and file as I found it throughout the length and breadth of Europe," declared Rabbi Wise, speaking before the teachers at the Plymouth County convention.

Rabbi Wise has just returned from a tour of Europe and the picture which he painted of the conditions and the immediate outlook was anything but bright. The rabbi also flayed the Ku Klux Klan, declaring it to be a new species of American insanity and the usurper of American democracy.

Again, Be Thankful Who Understands Girls? Governments Break Up Cannibal Rats, Savage Men

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.

ELOQUENTLY President Harding proclaims Thanksgiving this year on November 30. You are to "give thanks, supplicate and show devotion." There are reasons. Crops are good. We are still out of the League of Nations. We didn't accept the "Turkish mandate."

We live in a country that isn't going to have revolution. Heterogeneous populations, in which one element would promptly suppress any other element, guarantees that.

The death rate is falling, times are not perfect, but are not bad. Government bonds have gone to par. Those not satisfied by the coming election will realize that elections REFLECT the times. They influence or lead to no great extent.

So, obey the President, and be thankful.

Belle Miller, sixteen years old, very pretty, left these few words when she killed herself: "I may as well die, as I am in everybody's way."

Some fickle young man about eighteen is probably responsible for that. There ought to be some way to make sensitive girls understand that things that happen at sixteen will seem very unimportant at sixty, and at twenty-six, as unimportant as events in the nursery.

Every high school girl in Chicago is asked "to demand a certificate of clean health from the man she proposes to marry." Good idea, but on that basis Napoleon and Alexander would have remained single. Napoleon had the itch. Alexander probably had a slight touch of epilepsy.

Get healthy husbands, young ladies, by all means. But above all get INTELLIGENT husbands. Fathers and mothers can usually be trusted to see that the gentleman is not a leper.

And, sad to relate, the average high school girl can be trusted to forget all about everything else when she meets a young gentleman with a feeble moustache and an earnest eye.

After all it is the average that counts, and the average is good.

Russian Bolsheviki went in one direction, letting the bottom of the heap govern—with a little help from the middle. Fascisti went in the other direction, determined that the bottom of the heap—that is what they call Socialists and Radicals—should have nothing to do with government.

Changing government is spreading. To visit this writer came Dr. N. Lupu, editor of Aurora, an energetic newspaper published at Bucharest. He says peasants will soon take the government of Rumania, as peasants have already done in Bulgaria.

Poland starts an imitation Fascisti movement, with a girl leading. You observe that there was a Turkish Joan of Arc, busy with Kemal. There was a charming young Italian girl also called Joan of Arc active among the Continued on Page 10, Column 2.

Gettigan to Fight Verdict

COUNSEL PLANS TO APPEAL

Convicted of Manslaughter in Death of Aunt; May Get Twenty-Year Term

J. Thomas Gettigan of Revere was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of his aunt, Mrs. Lizzie M. Cook, also of Revere.

The maximum penalty is twenty years' imprisonment. Sentence will be passed later. His counsel plans to carry the case higher on appeal.

This is the second time that Gettigan has stood trial for the crime. Several months ago a jury reported a disagreement after twenty-four hours' deliberation. He was indicted both times on a charge of murder.

JURY OUT SIX HOURS.

The second jury was out for six hours. It is understood that for some time the jury stood seven to five for conviction on the charge of murder. When it was found that no agreement could be reached a verdict of manslaughter was agreed upon.

Gettigan took several exceptions during the trial and they will entitle him to go before the Supreme Court if it is deemed advisable by the court.

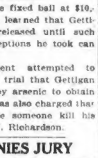
BAIL FIXED AT $10,000.

Judge Dubuque fixed bail at $10,000 when it was learned that Gettigan could be released until such time as the exceptions he took can be passed on.

The government attempted to show during the trial that Gettigan killed his aunt by arsenic to obtain her fortune. It was also charged that he tried to have someone kill his uncle, Clinton W. Richardson.

JUDGE DENIES JURY GALLON OF WHISKEY

Worcester, Nov. 4.—Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the Superior Criminal Court sent a hurry call after a gallon of real whiskey which had been carried to a jury room during deliberation of the case of John Scanlon of Clinton, tried for illegal liquor keeping.



JUDGE W. P. HALL.

The court ordered the jury back to the court room and asked District Attorney Charles B. Rugg if he had read of what happened recently in Boston, when some liquor went to a jury room and never came back.

On Pension Roll

Famous deaf, dumb and blind girl, who receives $2,500 annuity from Carnegie fund.

Helen Keller, famed deaf, dumb and blind girl, formerly of Wrentham, receives an annuity of $2,500 from the $4,600,000 pension fund established by Andrew Carnegie.

The remarkable achievements of Miss Keller attracted the attention of the ironmaster years ago, and frequently to intimates he spoke of her.

The fact that Miss Keller is to get the pension became known when an appeal was filed in the appellate division of the Supreme Court to have the fund declared unlawful.

Another pensioner is Viscount John Morley of London, who gets 1,000 pounds yearly. In all there are 400 men and women on the pension roll.

Most of those receiving annuities are more than sixty and many are more than eighty years old. Some get as little as $70 monthly, while others get as much as $5,000 a year.

And many of them are workmen grown too old for their trades, workmen who helped the ironmaster reach the pinnacle of wealth and fame, while others once enjoyed prosperity but met with adversity.

In all Carnegie gave away $350,000,000, the reporting shows, and he died worth $22,000,000.

YANKEES IN SOVIET TRUST

U. S. Workers to Provide Capital of $1,000,000 for Clothing Factories

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 4.—The foreign concession department of the Soviet government has approved a contract giving the Russian - American Industrial Corporation the privilege of participating in the operation of the government clothing manufacturing trust, according to announcement here by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The contract, according to Hillman, calls for joint management of clothing factories, now employing 20,000 workers, the majority of whom are women. Hillman said he had agreed to furnish $1,000,000, of which $300,000 had been subscribed by workers in the United States.

The government had guaranteed against loss of the capital and also had guaranteed an 8 per cent. dividend to be paid in dollars, he said.

Premier Lenine bought two shares of stock in the corporation, handing Hillman a $20 bill.

The agreement gives the corporation a banking charter, under which it is planned to open banks in Moscow, Petrograd and other cities. The privilege of exporting furs and importing cotton from the United States for use by the Soviet textile trust is also embraced in the contract. The clothing trust has a working capital of $3,000,000, which gives the Soviets control to the extent of two-thirds.

Referring to the transaction, Hillman said: "In America, I represent labor—here I represent capital and it hasn't been an easy job to bring them together."

SAYS DRESS REFORM NOT UP TO SCHOOLS

Worcester, Nov. 4.—Regulation of the style and cut of the dresses worn by the young girls at the public schools should be the business of the parents and not the responsibility of the schools, according to Dr. Payson Smith, in speaking before 2,000 school teachers at the annual convention of the Worcester County Teachers' Association in Mechanics Hall. ACTRESS LOSES HER SUIT AGAINST PRINCE

Paris, Nov. 4.—Carolyn Settler of Pittsburgh, known on the stage as Caroline Little, lost her breach of contract suit here against Prince Alexandre Murat.

The judge said:

"When a man and woman mutually agree to be companions without marrying, the woman's partner is committing an illegal act and she cannot claim damages if the man breaks the contract."

The evidence showed that the Prince paid large sums to Carolyn from 1914 to 1918 and the court absolved him from any future responsibility.

The Sultan is declared by some of the newspapers to be ready to abdicate. But the general opinion is that he will ignore the decision reached at Angora.

INFANT OF MISSSING NORA HURLEY

Absence of fifteen-year-old South Boston girl has delayed trial of William Breen, accused of being father of the child.

"I'M NO VAMP," SOBS KAISER'S BRIDE-TO-BE

Doorn, Holland, Nov. 4.—Princess Hermine of Reuss, who will be married tomorrow to the former German Kaiser, comes to Doorn today, not as a happy bride, but with bitterness in her soul. Her lips will smile as she greets her new lord and master and receives the congratulations of the entourage at the former war lord's castle, but there will be blackness in her heart.

The intensity of the Princess, bitterness is equalled only by her determination to get even with those who made this day of "joy" one in which she feels that the whole world is against her.

Hermine—to put it succinctly—came to Doorn with the defiant will to win and punish. In an interview in the drawing room of her castle at Saabor, in Silesia, she had poured out her heart to the correspondent.

The correspondent asked the Princess:

"What about that mysterious trunk which is said to have arrived in Doorn the other day? It was said to contain the crown which the former Kaiser is personally to place upon your head."

A bitter, jerky laugh was the first reaction from this question.

Then, amidst sobs, the Princess exclaimed, "So that is the latest lie! I suppose they want to make me out a vain, ambitious creature. What is it you call it in the United States—Oh, yes 'vamped the Kaiser!' A crown? A crown of thorns, perhaps!"

The Princess has heard stories that Kaiser Wilhelm, one of the greatest "ex-catcher" in Europe, matrimonially speaking, has been nagged by her wife, that a letter of condolence did the trick.

Princess Hermine's sympathy, expressed when the Kaiserin died, has won her the title of Queen of Prussia and a diamond crown, price 500,000,000 marks, which she will receive upon her wedding tomorrow.

ITALIAN LABOR TO REBUILD SMYRNA

Rome, Nov. 4.—(By International News Service)—Premier Benito Mussolini has concluded an agreement with Mustapha Kemal Pasha by which Italian labor will be used in the rebuilding of Smyrna it was announced today. Smyrna was burned just as the Turks entered the city after the wild flight of the Greek army across Anatolia.

GIRL TO LOSE BABY UNLESS SHE RETURNS

Unless Norah Hurley, fifteen, returns to claim her baby, her aunt, Mrs. W. E. Morey, of No. 177 West Third street, will give the child over to the care of the State.

"I just love that child," said Mrs. Morey. "I would like to adopt it as my own, but they tell me I cannot do that without the written consent of the mother. As for her—well, I think interested parties are keeping her away."

The absence of the girl has delayed the trial of William Breen, forty-three, who is accused of being the father of the baby. Breen was scheduled to appear in Superior Court this week but postponement was made in the hope the girl could be located in order to testify.

DAUGHTER OF SLAIN SINGER TELLS OF MOTHER'S SECRETS

By CHARLOTTE MILLS,
Daughter of Slain Choir Singer.

Copyright by International News Service.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 4.—"God! what a coward I am to have married without love!"

This was the cry uttered on his honeymoon by Edward W. Hall, and later told to Mrs. Eleanor Mills, my mother, both of whom were found murdered on September 16.

For three days I have debated with myself whether or not I should comment upon Mrs. Hall's cold assertions to the reporters that she had never suspected anything, between Dr. Hall and my mother, that she was ignorant of what had apparently been going on, and that she still believed that he loved her and was faithful to her.

BARES HEART SECRETS.

I say I debated with myself because there are some things that even a grief-stricken daughter wishes to hide and the little intimate details that my mother told me before she was murdered are some of the things.

But I have decided that this is no time to consider my personal feelings or even the sacred memory of the things my mother told me from time to time that I must not consider my heartaches and pain but bare the little secrets of my heart because of the new light that it sheds and the good it may eventually accomplish.

My former Sunday school teacher was not, as she said, unsuspicious of my mother. Her suspicions, from

SUCCESS MUST BE FULLY PAID FOR

If the Average Young Man Realizes This, He Has a Good, if Not Better, Chance to Succeed Than the So-called Genius or Specially Favored One.

EDWARD A. FILENE,
Successful Boston Merchant with Nation-Wide Reputation.

IT has long been a maxim in my store that a business, in order to have the right to succeed, must be of real service to the community. Material prosperity is not of itself a goal for which any young man or woman should strive supremely. Only the rendering of some service to one's fellow-men can rightly be called success. But one may reasonably expect, as a by-product and reward of service, to obtain some degree of material success. In this world a material foundation is necessary for every basic structure. A business, to continue, has to make money. No one's career can be satisfactory that does not result in enough earnings to give security to him and to those dependent upon him.

To the young man who is just starting into business I would say that it does not matter what kind of work he is doing, provided it is useful work. But it does matter how he is doing it. Most of us, when we are young, think of the rewards of money that come from work. But the big thing is the training of the mind, the acquisition of mental energy and of will power that forms a solid foundation of character, giving stability to the possessor and a good basis for one's future building.

A very highly paid job, even though it may be a very useful job, is harmful if it is a "snap" and does not call for struggle. An easy job, if held long enough, will lead to mental and spiritual stagnation, loss of energy and ultimate failure in life.

Whether our particular job has this dangerous tendency depends mostly upon ourselves. We can usually make of our job just what we want it to be. But almost any honorable job—I was on the point of saying "any" job—will lead to success provided we look upon it as a gymnasium to increase our mental energy, our will power, our get-there-ness.

If we focus upon it in this way we shall try to do our work better and better each day and to demand more and more of ourselves. We shall never go round a difficulty or do a slack piece of work even if the "boss" can never find it out. We shall realize that every time we come to a snag in our job, and conquer it, we equip ourselves with new strength; and that every time we avoid a difficulty—go round it—we definitely weaken our character and therefore our power to serve.

From my long experience in "hiring and firing," the comforting truth has come to me that the average young man really has as good a chance, and often a better chance, to succeed than the so-called genius or specially favored one, provided that average young man realizes that success must be fully paid for, just as anything else one wants must be paid for. The gymnasium for developing the capacity for straight thinking, hard work, and good health, is found not in a few specially favored jobs, but in the average job. That is why one can, with few exceptions, begin to train himself for a big job—i. e., for a big service—through the position he is holding today, whatever it may be.

I wish I had the power to make you, who read this, understand once and for all that the road up to service depends not on the job, but on the way it is done. No "pull" or "luck" will help you unless you really understand this. You may seem to succeed for a time by smartness or luck or influence, but even if you do "get by" in spite of shoddy work and flabby mind and body, you will not be able to hold on to your so-called success when years turn the tide of life and declining strength makes it dependent on the right use of the experience you have gained, coupled with the reasoning of a rational, energetic and mellowed mind. If one has an ox-mind when his strength begins to fail, he will do ox-like things. But if, at that time, he has a well trained, energetic, rightly balanced man's mind, he may, like most successful men I know, make his greatest contribution to mankind after forty or even fifty years of age, and, by means of it, win a satisfactory material reward.

MOTOR NEWS AND NOTES

C. F. DONNOCKER Automobile Editor

SIX CYLINDER BORT A WONDER ON HILLS

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The new announcement of Dort Motor Car Company is no longer a secret. It is a six-cylinder car. The writer, together with J. G. Utterback and several members of the Utterback-Gleason organization, went to Worcester, Thursday night, just to try the new car out. These cars had just been unloaded from the freight and it was a crime to take them out and put them through their paces but the cars performed just the same.

CARS A REVELATION.

The road to Worcester has enough hills to test a car's ability in this respect and these brand new sixes seemed to forget there were any hills on the way. For acceleration, and pulling power the cars were a revelation.

The cars were so flexible that one claim of the company—"two to sixty miles an hour on high gear"—seems no fairy tale. The writer drove one of the cars later and saw it go two miles an hour on high and while it was not possible to test for sixty under the traffic conditions, the speed obtained in a short distance was so near that, that the writer has no doubt about the car's ability to do it.

One feature of the new motor, which is of the overhead valve type, is a force feed lubricating system, which oils the valve mechanism, as well as the customary parts, thus insuring diminished wear, and less friction. It is a very quiet motor.

NEW OILING FEATURE.

Another oiling feature is the pressure regulation, which is throttle controlled, increasing and decreasing the flow of oil according to the load on the motor. That is, you might be pulling at low speed with an open throttle and you would be feeding as much oil as you would with the same throttle opening at high speed.

It is claimed by the makers that this car is exceptionally economical in gasoline mileage. The new cars, touring and sedans of both the Yale and Harvard types are nice looking models, with graceful lines, but the old motorist listens to the hum of that motor and is enthusiastic over its performance. There's only one trouble with that car on the speed question. It picks up so quickly that you are going over thirty-five before you know it.

We took the car yesterday over some well known "demonstrating hills" and it performed. One out in Brighton is a mean test. There is no traction to speak of, and no chance for a start. It is a tough climb with lots of work on the differential. The writer knew the hill and picked it out and drove the car over it. Its performance was fine and compared with cars selling for a much greater price.

NEW MODEL GRAY CAR IS PRAISED

A new model of the Gray car has arrived. It is the runabout and shows some very distinctive lines.

W. H. Brown, president of the W. H. Brown Co., which handles the Gray in this territory, is very pleased at the enthusiastic reception which this latest model is receiving. The car really merits the praise given. It has a roomy rear compartment, large enough for golf clubs, as well as traveling bags. It was designed for a real runabout for the commercial traveler, as well as a light, snappy car for professional use.

Dear Mr. Fit-It—I have a 1917 Studebaker four, in good shape. This type has wire wheels and I was think ng of putting two spark plugs in each cylinder for double ignition. What benefit will ties be and what is the result? Thanking you, I remain, D. H.

Reply—It would be possible to do this, you way if desired, but I cannot recommend it as the gain would not be appreciable benefit as the motor is now designed for double ignition. It would be very easy to get a new starter for your car if you just tell you off hand where to get it and I strongly advise against changing any such changes.

Dear Mr. Fit-It—In taking my car out the other night I had trouble in starting. The engine was cold and I could get no heat. The weather has not been cold but here this trouble this summer and am at a loss to understand the reason. C. M.

Boston, Mass.

You must appreciate the fact that with any make of your driving is done at night the battery will not receive the charge that it does in the summer time and consequently your battery discharges more quickly. Unless you are driving continually in the day time you should have your charging rate set so that it will charge at a high rate. Also disconnect your clock so that your motor will remember that it is cold weather and the engine needs a little more is much harder to turn over.

Dear Mr. Fit-It—I have had trouble with one of my head lights being dimmer than the other. The garage man told me it was a bulb and I put in a new one. This did not help any, did even a. Can you give me any help in this matter. H. H.

Reply—Probably be in the connection at the lamp. Disconnect the wire and make sure that the light posting inside of the connection makes a good contact on the bulb. Sometimes it may happen that the spring terminal inside of the socket is pushed back and does not come in contact with the bulb. Try bending this spring terminal forward a little and see if this will help matters.

190-POUND HALIBUT GAFFED OFF MAINE

C. W. NASH AND HIS PRIZE CATCH.

HUGE HALIBUT CAUGHT BY AUTO HEAD

An automobile manufacturer goes fishing occasionally, just like anybody else. When C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Company, gaffed this 190 pound halibut off the coast of Maine last week, his catch was larger than he had anticipated. Mr. Nash was fishing for cod.

There were two others in the boat with him. The moment they sighted the halibut, a deep water fish, following an unsuspecting cod to the surface, they made ready to gaff it. As he was pulled in, floundering and flopping over the side of the boat it is understood that the halibut expressed a low opinion of the automobile industry.

The fish measured six feet, nine inches. Fishermen of Cutler, Maine, say this was the first halibut ever caught off the coast there.

UNIQUE TOURING BUS EXHIBITED

A rather unique touring bus was in town this week and several newspaper men, as the guests of C. P. Rockwell, had a short ride in it. This new car is the product of the Pacific Coast and is known as the Fageol. It is equipped with a 4-cylinder Hall-Scott motor. It has wonderful speed for a large bus and rolling along at thirty-five miles an hour rides like a limousine. The seating arrangement is most luxurious.

Safety in riding is taken care of with a low-hung frame, 70-inch road and Westinghouse air brakes. The brake control is through the medium of a foot actuated automatic ap valve. F. R. Fageol, the designer, was with the car, which came over the road from Chicago.

This car seems destined to aid municipalities in solving the transportation problems.

RUSH PAVING OF LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Northern Indiana has been favored with such excellent weather for several weeks that it begins to look as if the paving of the Ideal Section of the Lincoln Highway can be completed this year.

Work is now going forward rapidly and only a few more days will be necessary to complete the mile and a third of road which is to be laid and two bridges. From 400 to 450 feet of twenty-foot, ten-inch reinforced concrete are being laid daily.

The forty-foot width is being laid in two twenty-foot strips, which, however, join at the centre to make forty feet of continuous paving.

During October the progress of the work was inspected by many visitors with a technical interest in the way the job is handled. These included army officers, representing the War Department, Federal engineers and visiting State Highway officials.

The completion of the paving and bridges this year will leave for next Spring only the construction of the shoulders, the landscape work and the installation of the electric lighting system for night travel.

J. N. Gunn, vice-president of the United States Rubber Company, which is providing most of the cost of the job, and who is also president of the Lincoln Highway Association, is expected to personally inspect the progress of the work in the near future.

ARMY TRANSFERS LISTED FOR HUB

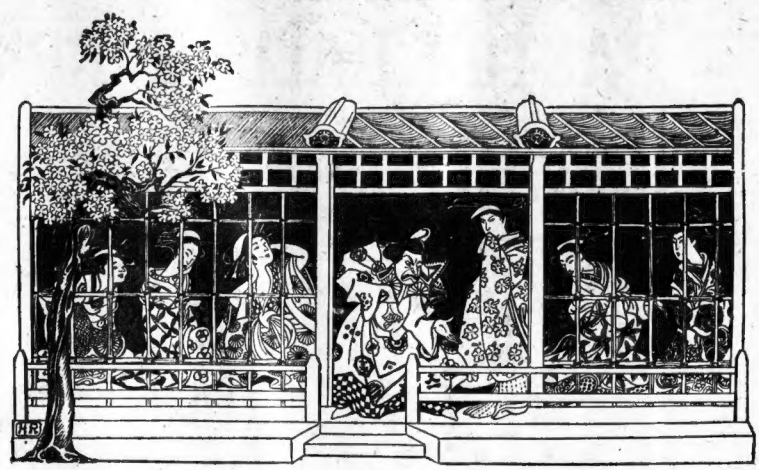
"WHERE WOMEN SIT IN CAGES LIKE ANIMALS IN A ZOO"



The Great International Novel That Was Suppressed

The Japanese Government smiled indulgently on the picture of the "Yoshiwara"—a picture of tiny, slant-eyed women, in gorgeous kimonos, laughing and chattering behind the bamboo bars of cages beneath blossoming cherry trees.

Overnight—a veil was hurriedly drawn. Silently—a heavy curtain was dropped in a vain endeavor to cut off from the sight of men and women the picture of the Yoshiwara.

With secret speed the women were ordered out of the bamboo cages!

KIMONO

"Kimono"—a great international novel, the story of the marriage of an English nobleman and a Japanese heiress—has brought down sinister resentment—and suppression—in Japan.

Powerful influences were brought to bear in order to have the book similarly suppressed by another friendly nation. The author, writing under a fictitious name, has incurred the anger of the Government to which he was an accredited agent.

By John Paris

What is the Yoshiwara?

Why have clandestine efforts been made to have the book suppressed in a foreign country, and why was it suppressed in Japan?

Could a novel be potent enough to bring down the anger of a great Government?

What is this story of intrigue, of unspeakably-gained riches, of powerful influences being brought to bear to wreck the lives of two innocent people?

"Kimono" strips the veil from the time-honored ideas of the romance and beauty of Japan. It exposes in all its ugliness and horror a country where women are not allowed to have a soul but are merely regarded as a commodity. American men and women cannot look except with burning indignation at the amazing revelations in "Kimono," whose author has been obliged to hide his real name under the fictitious title "John Paris." At the same time they will read a story in which real love only survives the most unimaginable dangers and influences.

Considering "Kimono" at the same time a vital contribution to the enlightenment of American men and women and an international novel that will rank high in the writing of the decade, the Editors announce that "Kimono" will run daily,

FITZ SAYS COX IS "IN HANDS OF CORPORATE INTERESTS"

RAPS G.O.P. AS FOE OF LABOR

Republicans Blamed for Bay State's Excessive Cost of Living

Lawrence, Nov. 4.—John F. Fitzgerald, Democratic candidate for Governor, brought another strenuous day of campaigning to a close at a largely attended rally here, reiterating his claim that the Republican party is antagonistic to labor, and insisting that only by electing the Democratic ticket can labor secure a square deal.

Fitzgerald declared that Governor Cox is "in the hands of the corporate interests" and pointed out that practically all of the laws which are designed to protect the rights of the working man were passed under Democratic Governors.

He again referred to Governor Cox's refusal to meet him in public debate, saying:

SWEEPS THROUGH MIDDLESEX

"My opponent states that he is afraid to meet me publicly. He says that he would be hopelessly beaten in singing 'Sweet Adeline.' But Governor Cox will sing a different tune next Tuesday night. He will sing a swan song—the swan song of the Republican party."

Fitzgerald put in a busy day Starting out with an address in Clinton, he swung all through Middlesex County, addressing many well-attended open air rallies. He then went to Lynn for a rally, and from there hurried to Lowell and Lawrence.

Large crowds gathered to hear him in each place, and his plea for a liberalization of the prohibition law was greeted enthusiastically. At Groton he visited the U. S. hospital for disabled soldiers, promising the ex-service men that when elected he will do all in his power for them.

WOMEN KNOW CONDITIONS.

In his speech here, before a huge crowd, he said:

"The independent voters control this State. They decide every election. Their ranks have been enormously swelled by the women, who are tied to neither party, who are progressive and non-partisan.

"The woman in charge of domestic affairs is keenly alive to existing conditions. She knows the lack of coal. She knows the high cost of living. She knows that more and more of the family income goes out each week for the necessaries of life. The storeman tells her that the tariff is responsible, and he is powerless to prevent the ascending prices. She is going to hold the party in power responsible.

TARIFF RAISES PRICES.

"Mr. Lodge confessed a few weeks ago that the prices of the suit and the coat have been increased by the tariff. He did not mention the other articles. Wool enters into every article of wear, from the father's cap to the mother's coat and the baby's blanket.

"Not alone the coat and suit mentioned by the Senator, but all the one hundred and one articles of wear have increased in price because the party in power thought first of its Senators in the wool-growing business and of those interests that control its party councils, and not at all of the average man and woman.

"The most prices are higher in Massachusetts than elsewhere in the country. Why? The Republican party is the answer. It is the party in power. It is responsible.

Mr. Hultman of the Commission on Necessaries of Life denounced those prices as unjustifiable and the State administration told him he "talked too much."

"Coal is scarce and high in price. Why? The administration knew last Spring that the strike was at hand but it let four long and important months pass before it made any pretense of being interested. The railroads wanted the strike. Wall Street cares not whether the people of New England freeze. They refused to meet the men at all, just as the millowners rejected all offers of arbitration by the mill workers."

Cole Broadcasts Speech Against Censor

The fight against film censorship in Massachusetts was carried on by radio when General Charles H. Cole, chairman of the Committee of Massachusetts Citizens against Censorship, broadcasted a speech in opposition to the bill from the Medford hillside station.

"The people of Massachusetts are going to refuse to put blinders on themselves and give one man the power to tell them what they can see and read," he said. "As citizens of a free State of a free nation, the citizens of Massachusetts are going to vote down the proposed motion picture censorship law next Tuesday.

"The law as it stands, providing heavy punishment for any person responsible for an immoral entertainment, satisfies them. Local regulations and Federal statutes against interstate transportation of immoral films, they are convinced, are enough."

"Censorship a Menace to Democracy"--Walsh

Every effort to curb and restrict the personal liberties of the individual lessens democracy and promotes autocracy. Whenever we seek to regulate how our people should dress, what they should eat and how they shall amuse themselves we are restricting personal liberty. Every attempt to vest government officials with power to review, inspect, investigate and examine the private or business affairs of our people should be vigorously opposed unless it is clearly established that such action is necessary for the general public weal.

So long as there are general laws (if they are not ample or broad enough they should be made so) making it unlawful to present indecent and improper forms of entertainment there ought to be no necessity for censorship of the amusement of the people. I am therefore opposed to all forms of censorship, whether of the press, the pulpit or pictures.

Since the appointment of former Postmaster-General Will H. Hays as director of the movies there has been a steady development for good in picture production. I am satisfied that in his hands the movement for better pictures will steadily continue.—Statement by United States Senator David I. Walsh.

WAR VET HUNTS FOR LONG-LOST MOTHER

John P. Marmion of No. 2958 Washington street, Roxbury, is searching for the mother he never knew.

Twenty-three years ago Mannion was born in the Waltham Hospital in Belmont. He was placed in the home of Mrs. Ellen Smith at Somerville shortly after his birth, and although his mother paid his board until he was able to earn his own living, the young man has never seen her.

PASTOR HALL WAS MARRIED 'WITHOUT LOVE'

my mother's personal observations, dated as far back as February.

"There are many instances and little acts that show Mrs. Hall was suspicious and jealous. I shall give a few that my mother told me. Before Mrs. Hall's suspicions were aroused she and my mother were the best of friends. Though in different social circles, they were intimate and Mrs. Hall frequently used to take my mother to her personal friends.

"But some time before this terrible tragedy, Mrs. Hall suddenly became cold and distant. My mother at that time returned home and told me that she had become ill and had been forced to lie down.

"Dr. Hall bent down over me and asked how I felt," she said. "Just then I happened to look at Mrs. Hall and I was startled by the angry look in her eyes."

One time my mother went out to the Evergreens with Dr. Hall to take something to the home. On the way something happened to a tire and mother helped Dr. Hall while he fixed it by handing him some tools. A couple of weeks later while mother and Mrs. Hall were driving Mrs. Hall turned and said:

"Eleanor, suppose something happened to the car. You could fix it, couldn't you?"

"No," said my mother.

"Oh, yes, you could," returned Mrs. Hall in a peculiar tone which my mother commented on when she returned home.

These are a few of the instances which arouse thoughts in me in view of recent occurrences. There were other times when Mrs. Hall refused to go riding if my mother was present, but insisted upon going when mother went out with Dr. Hall.

Coast Artillery Men on Long Hike from Fort Adams

Portsmouth, R. I., Nov. 4.—In a practice march and hike, 280 men from Fort Adams have arrived here, a distance of eleven miles. The enlisted men with their officers belong to the coast artillery unit. Only one man gave out, and this was due to over-exertion after being a convalescent in the hospital.

ELOPING COUPLE FORGIVEN BY PARENTS

Once more the old saying that "love will find a way" is proven this time in the romance of sixteen-year-old Mary Deeb, of No. 123 Tyler street, South End.

A couple of weeks ago Mary eloped to Providence with George Simons of Oak Bluffs. Both were under the legal age, but gave false ages at Providence city hall on the marriage license.

The bride's father, John D. Deeb followed and had them arrested. They were brought back to Boston charged with giving false information to a marriage license clerk, and with stealing $200 from Deeb.

Mary had a long talk with her father and mother, and finally parental forgiveness was bestowed on the elopers. The parents withdrew the charge of larceny, saying that the $200 can count as a wedding present.

Love Wins!

MISS MARY DEEB

A real wedding will be held Monday.

J. J. ASTOR WOULD TAKE 40 MILLION

New York, Nov. 4.—Should Major John J. Astor, Conservative candidate for Parliament, carry out his announced intention of transferring to England his American wealth, accumulated by the late Baron William Waldorf Astor, American born lord, about $40,000,0000 subject to taxation will leave this country, according to information in banking and real estate circles, where the announcement aroused the greatest interest yesterday.

It was suggested that Major Astor's decision was predicted upon a new situation in which he found himself as a result of living in one country and possessing wealth in another.

ANOTHER GIRL DEAD IN FIRE AT FACTORY

New York, Nov. 4.—The fourth victim of the fire which destroyed the East Thirteenth street celluloid factory died today. She was Miss Frances Aragonne, who was trapped with eleven other young women on the third floor of the building. Two women fell to their death during the fire and a third died in a hospital.

Four others were in the hospital in serious condition today, and another was convalescing at her home. Three escaped unhurt.

While the blaze started in the celluloid factory on the second floor, all of the casualties were among employes on the third floor, where Solomon Mass had an embroidery business. Shut off by flames and smoke from the stairway and fire escape the girls crowded around three from windows, from which two finally fell to their death. Three girls climbed to the roof and escaped to an adjoining building.

1,522 Ex-Service Men Sought Jobs from State in October

The report of the State Public Employment Office for the month of October states that during that period 1,522 ex-service men visited the office looking for work and that 149 secured positions. An increased demand for girls between sixteen and twenty years of age for factory work and for other young women for domestic positions is prevalent, the report states.

FASCISTI RAID RUSSIANS AND SLAY ONE

Paris, Nov. 4.—The go-getter tactics of the Fascisti, which have overcome obstacles with amazing swiftness, are now reported to be striking a few snags.

Conflict with the Soviet government at Moscow is feared as a result of a raid which dispatches to Paris say was made upon the Rome bureau of the Russian commercial delegation by seven Fascisti from Imola.

Rushing into the offices, the Fascisti dragged out an alien employe, posted him against a wall and shot him.

HUNT FOR AUTO THIEF AMONG HOSPITALS

Cambridge police today are searching the hospitals of Greater Boston for a wounded man in the hope of tracing three automobile thieves who escaped from Amory street, Cambridge, in a hail of shot, after being discovered tampering with a machine.

Two automobiles in which the gunmen escaped were found early today in different parts of Cambridge. One had a bullet hole in the windshield in such a position that the authorities are confident some one must have been hit.

Anti-Child Labor Act Urged on U. S. as 1,000,000 Toil

Atlantic City, Nov. 4.—A petition to Congress for a constitutional amendment against child labor was urged by Owen P. Lovejoy before the twenty-second annual convention of the Jersey Mothers' Congress and Parent Teachers' Association.

He said that in 1920 there were 1,000,000 child laborers in the country between the ages of ten and fifteen.

One of the automobiles was identified as the property of Miss Lillian Carey of Wellesley, reported a September an stolen from Copley square.

THREE INJURED IN CRASH AT METHUEN

Lawrence, Nov. 4.—Three men were injured, one seriously, when an automobile in which they were riding crashed into a stone water trough at Matron's corner, Methuen, early today. The injured men were taken to the Lawrence General Hospital.

John Billipon, 23, suffered a possible fracture of the skull and other injuries and is in a serious condition.

John Alerese, 24, received a compound fracture of the right arm and

Man Gets the Heart Balm in This Promise Suit

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—A verdict for $1,500 damages in favor of George Carter, forty-five years old, who charged Miss Alice Peel, forty-four, with breach of promise to wed him, was returned by a jury in Superior Court.

Carter said he and Miss Peel became engaged in November, 1919, and he gave her a $400 diamond ring. Later she jilted him.

Miss Peel did not appear to defend the suit, which was for $10,000.

GIRL DIES IN FIRE, SUITOR IS JAILED

Chicago, Nov. 4.—The heroine of an apartment house fire was dead today and her rejected suitor, a teacher of Spanish, was under arrest pending investigation of the blaze that swept through a five-story apartment building and drove nearly 400 persons from their homes.

The girl was Bernice Holm, twenty-five years old, who saved her mother, and returned to the flame-filled building and was burned to death.

The WEEK'S BUSINESS in NEW ENGLAND

PORT BENEFITS BY COMBINE OF SHIP REPAIR FIRMS

Of great importance to all interested in the development of the port of Boston, is the announcement, which has just been made, of the absorption of the Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Company of East Boston by the Atlantic Works, the combined business to be continued under the name of the Atlantic Works.

The consolidation will provide the port of Boston, for the first time, with a completely equipped ship repair plant capable of handling all sizes of ships from the smallest tug to the huge 10,000 ton freighters.

The Atlantic Works buys purchased part of the real estate, the dry dock and much of the other equipment of the Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Company.

TO INSTALL LARGE FLOATING DRYDOCK.

As soon as possible a large floating drydock will be installed, in addition to the small floating drydock acquired from the Bertelsen & Petersen Company. This latter was the first floating drydock ever put into operation in the port of Boston.

With these two docks and the three marine railways which are part of the equipment of the Atlantic Works, well-balanced facilities will be provided for the drydocking, repairing and reconditioning of all classes of vessels. The building of marine machinery will continue to be an important feature of the company's business.

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN.

The enlarged Atlantic Works list of officers will be headed by Fred McQuesten as president. The other officers chosen are: Vice-president, Jens Bertelsen; treasurer and general manager, Alfred E. Cox, assistant treasurer, Robinson Works manager, Paul J. Bertelsen; purchasing agent, Joseph M. Robinson; superintendent, George S. Webster; outside superintendent, Ralph C. Christensen; assistant superintendent, Carl G. Hedblom.

The two organizations which now form The Atlantic Works have had an interesting history. The original Atlantic Works was incorporated in 1853 and began business on Chelsea street, East Boston. Vessels for use in foreign waters were constructed until the outbreak of the Civil War, when the entire facilities of the works were employed in government work. The monitors Nahumkeag and Casco were built here, and later the Monadnock, Agamenticus, Pascoag, Passaconaway and Shackamaxon receiving their turrets.

IRON SHIPBUILDERS FEW.

At that time there were few concerns in America capable of building iron ships and the work done here by local concern attracted national attention. In 1869 the plant of the McKay & Aldus Iron Works on the westerly side of East Boston, with docks opposite the Charlestown Navy Yard, was purchased and with this addition to its facilities The Atlantic Works enlarged its activities in the building of iron and steel ships, marine engines and boilers and general machine work. From 300 to 500 workers have been employed.

At the present location a large part of the work done has comprised the building of tugboats, ferryboats, fire and police boats and revenue cutters, in addition to altering and repairing steamships of the merchant marine.

During the war one of the vessels altered and refitted at The Atlantic Works was the famous Hamburg-German S. S. Kronprinzessin Cecilie, now the U. S. Shipping Board S. S. Mount Vernon.

In 1918 The Atlantic Works purchased the property of the East Boston Dry Dock Company and shortly after added a portion of the property of the Boston Storage Company. The plant now embraces nineteen acres of land, of which two and one-half acres are covered with buildings.

REFITTED U. S. TRANSPORTS.

The Bertelsen & Petersen Company was founded in 1892 by Jens Bertelsen, and engaged in the same line of business as The Atlantic Works. The rapid growth of the company resulted in its incorporation in 1906 as the Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Company. Soon the volume of business handled equalled that of The Atlantic Works.

Numerous vessels were outfitted during the World War. Among them was the Ex-German S. S. Cincinnati, renamed the U. S. Transport, on which Paul Bertelsen of the firm served for several months as engineer officer while this ship was engaged in transporting troops to France.

Building Figures Show Large Increase

Contracts for building and engineering operations in New England, awarded during the week ending Tuesday, October 31, amounted to $8,361,400, according to statistics compiled by the F. W. Dodge Company. This is a gain of $4,582,300 over the corresponding period of 1921, and is the third largest amount ever recorded for a similar period during the past twenty-two years.

POLITICS AID TO BUCK BUSINESS

"We never let politics interfere with our business," declares R. G. Reilly, manager of the Buck Printing Company of 641 Atlantic avenue, Boston. "In fact politics is responsible for a goodly share of our business at the present time, when all manner of printed material is being distributed by the various candidates for office and by their friends."

The Buck Printing Company is one of the oldest printing establishments in Boston, having been established nearly eighty years. It is known as one of the largest show printers in the East and has recently developed a special department for handling commercial printing. Under Mr. Reilly's management the Buck Printing Company has grown until today it is one of the largest printing organizations in Boston, and is recognized as one of the leaders in its specialties.

FENCE BUILDING UNUSUALLY BRISK

Though the Fall season is usually considered the slack period in the wire fence business, the Security Fence Erecting Company of No. 28 Somerville avenue, Somerville, reports an unusually large amount of orders in hand for this time of year. Evidently more and more people each year are taking advantage of the opportunity to have the work of improving their properties done during the Fall months, thus securing the benefit of the attractive prices which are made in order to keep the regular force of workmen employed steadily.

A handsome booklet, containing illustrations and descriptions of the various types of fences erected by the Security Fence Erecting Company, has just been issued and will be mailed without charge to those who are interested enough to write or phone for a copy.

OLYMPIA FUR CO. OPENS NEW STORE

The Olympia Fur Company, which has maintained its headquarters in Brockton for the past four years, has established its principal office and display room at No. 8 Winter street, Boston, where a full line of first quality furs, including seals, is now on display.

SIMPLE SYSTEM TO HEAT GARAGE

The rapidly increasing tendency on the part of motorists to keep their cars in commission all through the Winter has made necessary the development of methods and devices to maintain suitable temperatures in the garage with a minimum cost of operation.

Because of the large number of motorists among its customers, Chandler & Barber of 124 Summer street, Boston, have received many inquiries regarding the best equipment for this purpose. After considerable investigation, during which many types of heaters were inspected, it was decided that the Syracuse self-regulating hot-water garage heating system possessed certain advantages found in no other heating system.

As a result Chandler & Barber have placed a large number of these systems in various private garages in metropolitan Boston. No system installed has failed to give entire satisfaction.

This system consists of an all-cast iron boiler with automatic temperature regulator, expansion tank, hot-water thermometer and necessary radiators and pipings. Various sizes are available for every size garage. Besides the regulation is controlled by the temperature of the water, rather than by the expansion and contraction of water in the system, the complicated and troublesome necessity of maintaining an even water level is permanently eliminated.

RAPID SERVICE MORE THAN MERE NAME

The value of a good name is fully recognized in most lines of business. Many an organization owes its initial success to a happily chosen name, but few concerns have ever been able to achieve permanent success on the merits of a name alone.

As one of the most important factors in the printing business is speedy delivery of the printed product to the buyer, the management of the Rapid Service Press, located at No. 530 Atlantic avenue, Boston, decided that there should be no reason for doubt on the part of the prospective customer as to the type of service to be obtained from its organization.

Dedicating an organization as "Rapid Service" and living up to the appellation are two different things, but the success which has attended the efforts of the Rapid Service Press, and its phenomenal growth tells how well it has lived up to the name. Night and day, wasting not a minute, the equipment of this organization is at work for its customers. To speed up composition a battery of seven fast Linotype machines is maintained. Operating day and night this is equivalent to about 20 machines employed one shift only. Presses of the latest model, with individual motor power drives, and with a wide range of capacity for different size forms, are kept running night and day.

The layout of the composing room is arranged to facilitate make-up and the rapid preparation of work for the presses.

And last, but not least, an organization is maintained to take care of printing orders at whatever time of day or night best meets the convenience of its customers.

SALVAGED PILES CUT FOR FIREWOOD

The large amount of new wharfage under construction and contracted for along the coast has resulted in excellent business, reports W. S. Rendle & Sons Company of No. 322 Border street, East Boston.

This well known organization, which is recognized as a leader in its specialty—that of dredging and pile driving for wharves and docks, and excavation and foundation work for large buildings—has developed its business to a high degree of efficiency.

An instance of the attention given to little things by this company is seen in the salvaging of old piles and lumber used in its operations. After reclamation it is sent to the company's plant at Metropolitan Wharf, foot of Pembroke street, Chelsea, and there sawed into lengths suitable for use in fire places, stoves and boilers. As the materials are largely pine and hardwoods, the heat value of the material is considerable, and the company, while deriving an additional revenue from its operations, is able to sell this reclaimed lumber at reasonable prices.

OPERA SEASON TO OPEN MONDAY IN BOSTON

With Tamaki Miura, Japan's pretty prima donna, who, despite husband's and family's protests, sailed from her native shores to come to America and sing her famous role of "Madame Butterfly"; Marie Rappold, the former Metropolitan soprano; Eleonora Cisneros, distinguished American mezzo; Ester Ferrabini, Boston's gifted lyric star; Anna Fitziu, rare beauty of the operatic stage, and, Manuel Salazar, his former leading dramatic tenor, but now of the Metropolitan, New York, Impresario Fortune Gallo opens his two-weeks' San Carlo season at the Boston Opera House Monday night.

The engagement affords music-lovers an unusual opportunity of hearing the best standard works, and a few of the modern compositions, at prices which should enable nearly all to share in the pleasure of the events.

Operas that have encircled the globe with their popularity and have made the reputations, not only of their composers, but of hundreds of the greatest singers, will receive traditional interpretation by those who have been born and raised within the reign of the mystic influence of the great art of music, and have become so imbued with the spirit and its meaning that it is to them a natural language, a habitual expression of their most profound and intense feelings.

A Really Antique Opera Coming Here

It is to the enterprise and courage of Albert Steinert, the concert manager, that we owe the chance to see "The Beggar's Opera" by John Gay, which will occupy the cunning little Fine Arts Theatre in the new State Theatre Building, and I am personally very grateful for the chance of seeing it.

This work, so far as is known, is the first English opera, and it is more than two hundred years old. It was revived in London two or three seasons ago and modern critics found that it was not only delightful entertainment but that its string of ballads which comprised the score was well worth listening to. London gave the ancient opera a splendid run. An American company starting in Greenwich Village failed dismally with it after a run of a few weeks. Meanwhile an English troupe took it to Canada and crossed the continent, winning success everywhere. It is this company Mr. Steinert is bringing to Boston.

With a highwayman for a hero, surrounded by a motley company of pickpockets, fences, stoolpigeons, sharpers and wenches of unequivocal repute, the action moves in society decidedly low.

Cantor Tells of Songs Best Liked

What kind of songs does the average play-goer enjoy most?

Eddie Cantor, famous lyric comedian star of the New York Winter Garden revue, "Make It Snappy," which will be the attraction at the Shubert Theatre beginning tomorrow night, has a story to tell to illustrate his answer to the question.

"There is a rev-ewer in New York who never lost an opportunity to 'pan' me whenever I showed my head," says the black-face Minstrel Boy. "He used to say that my songs were so racy that I ought to be singing in Lucifer's choir. Well, one day that hard-shell critic called me up and said he was acting for the entertainment committee of his church. And what do you think? They wanted me to go down there and sing for them—and bring all my songs! All my songs, mind you! Wouldn't that make you slip?

"Anyhow, I went down to that church entertainment and sang every song I could think of, barring none, and when I was all tired out, I started around in the audience collecting money for the church. They gave up $385, in addition to what they paid at the door. What do you know about that—and from people that the interviewer had imagined wouldn't like to go up to the theatre to listen to my popular songs?"

Faversham Here in Vaudeville

Between a preliminary for a new play and a moving picture contract, William Faversham is a busy man. On his library table was a one act by Alfred Sutro. Mr. Faversham read it and liked it. He wanted to try it out so he squeezed two weeks' time into his already crowded life and produced "A Marriage Has Been Arranged," and Mr. Faversham's judgment in the play was confirmed with a vengeance, as much so that the play in which he was to star this coming season has been postponed and he is to continue in "his playlet. The combination of the two distinguished names is creating a furore in vaudeville, even though vaudeville has become accustomed to distinguished personages.

The little play is an aristocrat among sketches, full of brilliant dialogue and delightful situations. It was written as a curtain raiser and was used as such in London where curtain raisers are still popular. It is, however, perfect vaudeville entertainment.

Mr. Faversham's career has been filled with successes. He has won unusual achievement. He has been an officer in the British army and in 1885 made his theatrical debut in a play called "Retained for the Defence." Two years later he came to America and with few exceptions he has acted here ever since and many of the greatest American successes owe much to his ability.

A General Exodus of Plays From Hub

Every show now playing in Boston is going to leave us flat with the exception of "the Bat" (unintentional pun?) and Jake Rosenthal, agent of that show, please copy) at the end of next week. We are to get a completely new deal.

Two of the departing pieces have been here since July 31—"Shuffle Along" and "Little Nellie Kelly." "The Music Box Revue" goes after a successful six weeks' run. Nance O'Neil, in "Field Ermine," and Doris Keane, in "The Czarina," will have completed a fortnight each.

This means that Monday, November 13, will be the biggest theatrical day of the season, no less than six brand-new attractions coming in. The St. James stock will put on a play new to Boston the same night, and there will be the San Carlo opera also with a change of bill.

"He Who Gets Slapped," the Theatre Guild production which New York admired in the Hollis attraction. Sam Harris' "It's a Boy" will move into the Selwyn. George White's Scandals takes possession of the Colonial. "Captain Apple Jack" is the novelty at the Tremont. For the Plymouth, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neil drama which set New York by the ears last season is announced.

This extraordinary bunch of attractions will give the sedate Boston first nighter brain fever trying to make his decision, but that celebrated man about town, raconteur, and bon vivant Jim Benson says there's nothing to it.

"How many of them are girl shows? Only one, George White's Scandals. Well thats where I'll be.

Here Comes the Watson Sisters

The Watson sisters, Fanny and Kitty, who are to appear at the Majestic Theatre the coming week with the musical revue, "Stolen Sweets," are known as well as the famous curative values of the old patent medicine men's panaceas "from Portland, Maine, to Portland Oregon, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf," as the old charlatans bromidically phrased it.

Kitty Watson.

Houstin Richards a Boy Again

It's like renewing my youth to play Willie Baxter in "Seventeen," said Houston Richards of the St. James.. It was only a few years ago that I passed through the same difficulties that faced William Sylvanus Baxter. I shall not forget the heartaches that went with the discovery that my lady love was more mine in imagination than in truth, and I shall also remember the thrill that accompanied the possession of my first dress-suit, so in "Seventeen" I shall feel perfectly at home because my appreciation of the character is realistic. I think this is the reason "Seventeen" was such a success as a play, because it presented life in a true form, without the disagreeable experiences that happen to us after we have passed that age of youth. It is dear and innocence and we appreciatively we hold to the memories of youth.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM

"Nice People," a powerful and timely comedy, will be the feature one of the season's most successful stage plays and starring Wallace Reid and Bebe Daniels, will be the photoplay feature at Loew's Orpheum Theatre for the coming week. The story of "Nice People" has to do with a modern girl who resents the sudden assertion of parental authority. In a fit of pique she finds herself accidentally in a seemingly compromising situation. The other man does not always understand and after some trying experiences the young woman does a right about face and brings happiness in the end to everyone. The vaudeville program for the week is one of the best billed at this theatre in a long time and is headed by Joe Shetlel's

"CAPTAIN APPLEJACK"

On Monday evening, November 13, at the Tremont Theatre, Sam H. Harris will present "Captain Applejack," a comedy by Walter Hackett, with Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash as its stars.

Mr. Harris has assembled a remarkable company to support Mr. Eddinger and Miss Nash. The cast includes Phoebe Foster, Hamilton Revelle, Helene Lackaye, Horace Pollock, Marie Wainwright, Harold Vermilye, Maud Andrew, Walter Scott and John Gray.

WATSON GIRLS MAJESTIC LEAD

"Stolen Sweets," comes to the Majestic Theatre next week as a feature of Shubert vaudeville with the famous Watson Sisters heading the list of talent. This revue is made up of several well known vaudeville acts, and takes its title from a particular offering. It is a musical comedy written by Herman Timberg, the vaudeville headliner. Mr. Timberg will develop it next season in three full acts with a big beauty chorus.

This, however, is just one of the treats of this attraction. Among the others are the Watson Sisters who are specially comedienne; Stepne and O'Neil who have what is called the most original comedy act in vaudeville, Berkes and Brazil, two youngsters who are master eccentric dancers; the De Koch Trio, Celia Davis and her five Kings of Syncopation, Mary Dawn and Florence Darley.

Another novelty in "Stolen Sweets" is a take-off on Romeo and Juliet. The Watson Sisters, one of the best known acts on the American vaudeville stage, will have an important part in this Shubert advanced vaudeville revue. The title of it is "Stolen Sweets." It takes its name from the thumb-nail musical comedy which is a part of the show.

"IT'S A BOY"

On Monday, November 13, Sam H. Harris will present at the Selwyn Theatre William Anthony McGuire's clever comedy "It's a Boy." The piece will come here direct from the Sam H. Harris theatre in New York with the cast and production now being seen in that theatre.

PLAYS Continuing—

"MUSIC BOX REVUE" at the Colonial. Last week of biggest show of this kind which ever took the road.

NANCE O'NEIL in "Field of Ermine" at the Plymouth. Extraordinarily fine production of Spanish play of great artistic merit. Departs next week.

"LITTLE NELLIE KELLY"—Last week of the greatest hit of the season. Leaves at the zenith of its popularity. Tremont.

DORIS KEANE in "The Czarina" begins her second and last week at the Hollis Monday.

"THE BAT" continues to fill the Wilbur with unfailing regularity.

"SHUFFLE ALONG," the all-colored revue at the Selwyn, leaves Boston after next week after a phenomenal run here which began July 31.

"SEVEN-E-LEVEN," the dark-colored revue at the Arlington, begins a second week next Monday.

CANTOR IN "MAKE IT SNAPPY"

Wonderful both as a spectacle and as a terpsichorean performance as well as entailing extravagance is "Make It Snappy," which will be revealed for the first time in this city at the Shubert Theatre on Monday night. In the big New York Winter Garden production, Eddie Cantor, the renowned black and white face comedian, is starred, and there is a cast of headliners. The feminine portion being Lillian Fitzgerald, Helen Carrington, Muriel DeForrest, Tot Qualters, Ingred Solfeng, Charlotte Woodruff, Betty Dair and Queenie Queening, while some of the men are Cleveland Bronner, "King of the Ballet," Lew Hern, Joe Opp, John Byam, George Hale, LeRoy Duffield and the marvelous Big Devils. "Make It Snappy" is in two acts and twenty-seven scenes, and it is said to be a whirlwind of musical comedy burlesque, opera, ballets and beautiful girls.

"SEVENTEEN" AT SAINT JAMES

For the first time in Boston since originally shown here by Stuart Walker, George A. Giles will present the Boston Stock Company in the stage version of "Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" at the St. James Theatre. Seldom has a play been so full of the atmosphere of that gangling age when shaving is more of an affectation than a necessity, and the possession of the first dress-suit an event not to be eclipsed in the life of those entering into manhood. Like the book, the play is full of good-humored jesting at the expense of youthful human nature's growing pains, and there is an irresistible sympathy inspired for the young characters, especially for that harried, misunderstood hero, William Sylvanus Baxter.

To Mr. Richards, Mr. Giles has given the part of Willie, a role for which he is particularly well suited.

FILM MAN'S ARTISTIC HOME

Bowles Bought House Made Famous by Great Painter Millet

The first of the plays that coined fun and dollars out of ghost fears was "Seven Days." By an interesting coincidence George Bowles, who put that one over as Wagenhals & Kemper's general manager, is now the foreign representative of D. W. Griffith, Inc., producing "One Exciting Night."

If any ghost haunts Bowles the ghostmaker, it must be the spirit of the immortal Millet, because the American bought the Barbizon scene and homestead of The Angelus and spends his Summers out of Paris in the old house made famous by the great painter.

J. J. McCarthy and George Bowles, operating under the name of International Films, have placed Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" and "Way Down East" in sixteen countries of Central and Western Europe. They report a keen demand for "One Exciting Night." The Boston notices of the play at Tremont Temple have been read from London to Bucharest and Naples to Copenhagen, and the traffickers in the "film villages" are bidding up

Old Japan in Film of "Nice People"

A colorful portion of old Japan forms the background for an important series of scenes in William de Mille's most recent picture, "Nice People," which will be shown at Loew's Orpheum Theatre the coming week. The scene is an ultra-modern cafe done in Japanese style. Beautiful Geisha girls serve as check room attendants and cigarette girls. Japanese youths in the costumes of their ancestors fill the attendant positions. Everything except the food, guests and music is Japanese. The first is American, the second are cosmopolitan and the third is Hawaiian. The setting is one of the most elaborate and lavish ever constructed for the screen. It consists of a spacious entrance hall leading into a large Japanese garden illuminated by Oriental lights and lanterns, dotted with tables and boasting of numerous interesting pieces of Oriental sculpturing, vegetation, pergolas and pagodas. The full structure filled nearly half of the new glass-roofed stage, recently completed at the Lasky studio.

Meighan Flies High in Film at State

Where time means money the airplane proves a valuable means of speedy locomotion, as Thomas Meighan will testify. While at work on the South Sea island scenes of his current picture, "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," which will be shown at Loew's State Theatre the coming week, the star was forced to make a six-mile trip by boat each day to and from location. To minimize the time needed for this daily travelling, Mr. Meighan secured a seaplane and pilot to convey him back and forth. Where three-quarters of an hour had been consumed before, six minutes now served. Alfred Green directed the notable cast assembled for this Meighan starring picture. Lenore Joy, Theodore Roberts, Albert Roscoe, June Elvidge, Alec Francis, John Milliard, Lawrence Wheat, Eva Novak and Robert Brower are the players who are in the supporting cast. Mrs. Meighan (Frances Ring) accompanied her husband on the island excursion. She made use of the seaplane to keep a dinner engagement on the mainland, a distance of thirty miles as the plane flies.

KNIGHTHOOD SCORES AT PARK

Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" has leaped into instant popularity at the Park Theatre, thus duplicating this production's experience in New York and Chicago, where it is enjoying a success hitherto unduplicated in the annals of photoplays. There are many and sufficient reasons for this extreme favor, principal of which is the completeness and massiveness of the production.

There has been nothing left undone to make it a memorable picture of the spirited life and times of the great monarch known to history as "Bluff King Hal." Existence in his court flourished into the most adventurous romance. Love was ardent, life was cheap, luxury was in the ascendency and adventure ran high in the circles of which Henry VIII. was the leading figure. And his engaging sister, Mary, was of the royal family and inheritor of its whimsicalities and stubbornness.

Her adventures form the plot of Charles Major's intriguing story from which the play and picture were made. Her love for Charles Brandon is a charming and adventurous romance inspiring the producer to prodigious efforts. The result may truthfully be proclaimed epochal and of a magnificence truly royal. Marion Davies has been a revelation to her admirers through her playing of the part of Mary Tudor, and she heads a company of prominent players of stage and screen that in number of luminaries is unmatched by any picture production.

KEITH'S THEATRE

William Faversham heads an interesting bill of stars at Keith's this week. He is appearing in an amusing one act play, "A Marriage Has Been Arranged." The Braggiotti Sisters are being held for one more week, warranted by their most unusual success. Another feature of the program is Miss Patricola, the scintillating melodist. The original college boys, Keaney and Hollis in "The Two Doctors" put over some great comedy. Their skit is a satire on medicine. Swift and Kelly, and Collins and Hart are other acts of interest. The Four American Aces opening the show is the most sensational casting act yet staged.

Harda Daube.

LIE WHO GETS SLAPPED'

One of the most interesting announcements of the current theatrical season is that of the forthcoming visit of the Theatre Guild's production of "He Who Gets Slapped," with Richard Bennett in his original interpretation of "He," which is to open an limited engagement at the Hollis St. Theatre Monday, November 13, under the joint direction of Sam H. Harris and Jos. M. Gates. Boston is the first city outside of New York to have the opportunity of seeing this much discussed drama by Leonid Andreyev which ran for one solid year in New York and is credited by not a few with being the Guild's greatest success.

GAIETY THEATRE

"Maids of America," the new laugh-making burlesque will be at the Gayety this week with catchtickling music and eye-tickling girls.

"Maids of America" is a breezy whirl through Laugh-Land. As far as it has traveled along the circuit this season it has received warm praise as a wonderful entertainment. Its two acts and six scenes are beautifully staged and the jokes and situations grow more amusing every minute.

The chorus, as the name of the production implies, is beautiful and is as pretty a collection of girls as ever danced and sang to melodious music. Each one is a nominee on the Beauty Ticket, as one would say in this election week.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS

George White will offer the fourth annual edition of his famous "Scandals" at the Colonial Theatre, for four weeks only commencing Monday, November 13. The new revue is coming here following a three months run in the Globe Theatre, New York.

PONSELLE TO SING HERE IN CONCERT

In her Boston program for Symphony Hall, November 12, Rosa Ponselle has scheduled the little known but extraordinary air from "La Wally," by A. Catalena, and the dramatic air from William Tell, which also appears but rarely upon concert programs. Miss Ponselle will have the assistance this season of William Tyroler, pianist, and formerly assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House. The young Italian soprano will sing all season at the Metropolitan this year, and will divide with Jeritza the dramatic roles, Jeritza singing the lyrical dramatic parts such as Tosca, while Ponselle will have the strictly dramatic roles like Aida. November 12 will be her only concert in Boston this year.

PROGRAM

1—Aria, "Ebben? Ne andro lontana," from "La Wally".....A. Catalani
Miss Ponselle.

GEBHARD RECITAL

Heinrich Gebhard's program for his recital at Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 11th, is one of the most interesting programs presented by any pianist for a long time. It is of interest to know that Mr. Gebhard is enjoying one of the busiest seasons he has had for a number of years.

RUSSIAN OPERA

With a company comprising over ninety members, including favorite principals from the former Imperial Opera Houses of Petrograd, Odessa and Moscow, the Russian Grand Opera Company will visit Boston on December 4th for a two weeks' engagement at the Boston Opera House.

"ANNA CHRISTIE"

Undoubtedly her work as "Anna Christie" in Eugene O'Neill's great drama of that name, stamps pretty Pauline Lord as one of the greatest of our younger American actresses. So deep is her etching of the part of Anna Christie that it becomes a permanent delineation on the beholder's mind and will remain part of his own experience. Mr. O'Neill's play is a notable contribution to the drama literature of America and must be classed among the season's greatest plays.

BRASLAU-GOGORZA CONCERT

Tomorrow at Symphony Hall, Miss Sophie Braslau, contralto, and Emilio DeGogorza, the well-liked baritone, will present the program at the second Steinert Concert. As is her custom Miss Braslau's selection of a program is interesting and Mr. De-Gogorza is a program-maker par excellence. Mrs. Cave Cole, and Miss Helen Winslow will be the accompanists.

Girl Drowned in Auto

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Miss Marion Bishop, nineteen, of Otisco, nurse, was drowned today when the automobile in which she was riding turned turtle into the Erie Canal at the end of Plum street, pinning her inside. Vincent J. Jordan worked his way out of the sedan after it sank in the water.

OLD TIME IRISH JIGS

The skirling of pipes, the merry measures of the old Irish jigs and reels and the rollicking airs of the Emerald Isle will make the walking at Symphony Hall tonight when the Irish Regiment Band makes its first Boston appearance. The big musical organization, every member Irish born, hails from Toronto, where the work it has done in keeping alive the beautiful melodies of Ireland has been very remarkable. The band possesses in Beatrice O'Leary an Irish soperano of the front rank, and in Pipe Major Trenholme an artist on the bagpipes who has no equal in this country.

Beatrice O'Leary

The program for tonight is Irish through and through, and the band has ready as encores all the Irish tunes which there wasn't room enough to set down on the program. One change has been made in the announced program to further increase the green flavor of it. The cornet solo, "Sounds from the Hudson," has been changed to "The Dear Little Shamrock."

1—Lily of Killarney.....Benedict
2—Procession of the Priests.....Perry
Pipe Major John Trenholme.
3—Cornet Solo—Dear Little Shamrock.....Rosey
Mr. William Tong.
4—Dancing, The Hornpipe.....Arnell
Miss Jean McNaughton.
5—Suite, Three Irish Pictures.....Arnell
Intermission.
6—Grand Review of Ancient and Modern Irish Airs, including some of the 47 Irish Centuries, to the present day, also Lilt dressed for the Irish Ball.....Hughes
7—Soprano Solo Marmion.....Dermot Macmurrough
Miss Beatrice O'Leary.
8—Descriptive Idyll, The Warbler's Serenade.....Perry
9—Song for Cornet, The Hunter's Nevin
Mr. R. E. Everard.
10—Dancing accompanied by the Irish Bones, The Jig, The Reel.....Arnell
Miss Jean McNaughton.
11—Selection, The Emerald Isle.....Arthur Pollitzer

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

"Broken Threads," a vivid and stirring play described to be greater and better than "Within the Law," the play that stirred hundreds with its tremendous story of legalized crim nality, will be staged by the popular Somerville Players. The theme of this play is one that never fails to find popular appeal with all classes of amusement seekers. Its dialogue is brisk, bright and breezy and there are many touches that carry with them rich humor and tender pathos. In the distribution of the leading roles Ann Ham tion, the competent head of the organization, will be assigned to a character admirably suited to her personality and one that will enable her wide scope for the display of her histrionic talents. Harry Bond will appear in the leading male role, which calls for clever acting that may be expected. Other members who will appear in "Broken Threads," are Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Peggy Shanor, Halbert Brown and Philip Sheffield. "Broken Threads" is announced for a single week only, with the usual daily matinees. For the following week Manager McArdle announces the revival of Richard Walton Tully's famous play, "The Bird of Paradise."

EDGAR A. GUEST

Edgar A. Guest, the poet of the people, who is to appear at Boston Symphony Hall on Thursday evening, November 16th, is at present touring the United States, and his audiences have proven not only to be large in numbers—but enthusiastic in their recognition of the interesting and pleasure giving qualities of his readings of his own every-day poems.

THE BEGGAR'S OPERA HERE

"The Beggar's Opera," a charming musical oddity of wit, gaiety and romantic sophistication, will be presented at the Fine Arts Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Monday night. This quaint musical play heralded by London, New York and San Francisco is the cleverest revival of recent years and will be shown here in identically the same manner as it was during its run of nearly two solid years in London. Written nearly two centuries ago, "The Beggar's Opera" is an old classic modern enough for the flapper of today. It removes the sanctimonious hypocrisies which cover a mass of human avarice and worldliness with the butcher knife of its broadsided brutal satire. Being human at those basic and perennial human frailties, selfishness, hypocrisy and treachery. Its tone is strangely and flippantly modern. The cast which will present the piece is one of the finest from the standpoint of both singing and acting that has ever been heard in light opera in this country. All are vivacious and magnetic and play the piece as a delightful romp. The Boston engagement is being sponsored by Mr. Albert Steinert by special arrangement with J. C. Duff and in the cast appear such competent artists as Arthur Wynn, Joseph Farrington, Marjorie Chard, Donanne Bawn Charles Magrath, Alfred Heather, and others. The scale of prices for "The Beggar's Opera" are $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 plus the necessary war tax.

ISA KREMER COMING

Isa Kremer, known as the "International balladist," whose unusual interpretations of folk songs have been the talk of Eastern Europe, has come to America and made her debut in Carnegie Hall, New York, last Sunday afternoon. Her unique method of presenting the folk songs of the different nations, which employs to an unprecedented extent the art of mimicry and gesture, immediately won her first American audience.

Miss Kremer is to give a recital in Boston in Symphony Hall on Tuesday evening, November 14.

LOEW'S STATE THEATRE

Thomas Meighan, one of the most popular screen stars, surrounded by a most powerful cast of players in the remarkable photoplay, "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," will be the principal feature at Loew's State Theatre for the coming week. In addition to this great attraction, Reba Daniels, a player of original merit, will be seen in an interesting picture entitled "Pink Gods." The story of "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" is that of a wild son of an old English family who roams the South Seas and falls in love with a pirate's daughter. He is then involuntarily carried away to New York. The girl follows on to New York and the difficulty for him to choose between the girl and a wealthy heiress makes a very interesting story. Theodore Roberts, Leatrice Joy, June Elvidge and Eva Novak are a few of the stars in the cast.

LOSTON THEATRE

Priscilla Dean as "Cigarette," the daughter of the Regiment in "Under Two Flags" from the immortal novel by Ou da is the feature at the Boston Theatre this week. A romance that has been translated into nearly every known language is depicted in the elaborate manner suitable to its fame. James Kirkwood plays the part of Corporal Victor and John Davidson the suave role of the Sheik. A good vaudeville bill, new comedy and news reel complete an unusually superior program.

FILM CENSOR THREATENS HOME RULE

"Home Rule" for cities and towns of Massachusetts, so far as regulating their enterta nments, will be lost entirely, if the movie censorship bill becomes law. Under the laws of the State, cities and towns, formed as corporations, are subservient to the State laws.

Hence, a State censor will take precedence over a local censor. The passage of the State censorship law will nullify local censorships, in fact if not in theory.

The local censor will become a figurehead only. Once a film is passed by the State Censor, it can be shown in any part of the State. Countless legal battles between town and city governments and the State are predicted if the censorship bill becomes law.

The Boston American contest will close on Monday. As soon as possible, the names of the winners will be announced. The writer of the best letter will get $250. There is a second prize of $100 and a third prize of $50.

Here are some letters:

REFLECTION ON PUBLIC.

Editor Boston American:

Censorship is the establishment of a system that recognizes the inability of the public to think. There will be a group of men who will not only extract from the public purse but extract from the public enjoyment.

Upon what standards will the censor cast his judgment? None. His judgment depends on his individual opinion. Extreme Puritanism is making one last effort to survive. Are we going to resuscitate this fanaticism?

The men composing the board of censors in other States claim that seventy-five per cent. of the people cannot think for themselves and yet they would take away from the people the means of improving public thought.

Censorship is an injury to the public and to the producer. We would not want to have a man, in our favorite bookstore, tear out pages from the works of eminent authors. When we buy a book we want to read the whole of it. To tear out a page is an injustice to the author and the reader. The same would be true of the movie film.

Are we going to pay a few men to mutilate our purchase of the right to read and see the books and the films. Answer that on November 7 by voting "No."

ALBERT D'AMATO,
No. 5 Moore street, East Boston.

ARRAIGNS CENSORSHIP.

Editor Boston American:

Censorship is advocated by two classes of people, those who place themselves on a pedestal and look down on the rest of the world as immoral, ignorant and stupid and those who seek more power.

The first class would appoint themselves our mental and moral guardians. They would imprison our minds, allowing no ray of light to enter before it had been filtered by their superior (?) intelligence. They attribute all the wrong in the world to that particular subject in which, for the moment, they are opposing.

In their opinion girls run away from home, men and women murder, because of the movies. They forget that these same crimes were committed long before we ever heard of the movies. They do not say that many men and women are swayed to better things by seeing life depicted on the screen.

The other class is the meaner of the two for they do not even try to benefit mankind. They realize that the movies are powerful and they would hold that power in the palms of their hands.

Let us not deliver ourselves to either class, but show our contempt for them by voting down the censorship amendment next Tuesday.

ETHEL CUTLER,
No. 15 Reston st., Dorchester.

PEOPLE WILL PAY.

Editor Boston American:

Aside from the fact that the act will only add one more weight to the already burdensome yoke of oppression, this idea of a State censorship strikes me as being an attempt to create some nice little political berths, for some certain few, looking for a soft snap and easy money. At the same time, it will make most excellent opportunities for those already in office to pay political debts rather than being actuated from any moral betterment motive. And the people will pay.

Films once censored by the already existing national censors should be sufficient for any one. Why should a certain few consider themselves more capable, with bigoted ideas, to judge? People who feel that their morals are in danger could leave the theatre, but those kind never do; they stay and knock. This is reason enough alone to defeat this bill.

If not, the pro-censors will soon have a bill which will think for us.

I protest in the interests of free speech and thought.

E. G. BROWN,
No. 22 Brett street, Brockton.

FEAR COLLAPSE OF MRS. CHRISTLER

Waterloo, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Relatives are expecting at any moment the collapse of Mrs. Anna W. Christler, widow of the "Bishop of all Outdoors," who was slain in Havre, Mont., a week ago by Mrs. Margaret Carleton, Montana's most beautiful woman" who then killed herself. Throughout the week the widow has been constantly at the side of the casket containing the pastor's body. She has slept but a few moments at a time.

PORT BOOMED BY LUFKIN AND CONRY

Concerted effort on the part of all interested in the development of the Port of Boston to secure abolition of the unfair railroad differentials now retarding its growth was advocated by W. W. Lufkin, collector of the Port of Boston, at the Fall round-up of the Association of Railroad and Steamboat Agents of Boston at the Engineers' Club.

The 125 members of the association present or need much interest as Mr. Lufkin told of the possibilities of this port and advantages which it could offer in the event of the abolition of the differential barriers.

Former Congressman Joseph A. Conry, who was recently returned from a trip through Europe, told his impressions of the transportation situat on in Europe and described the disintegration of the once excellent facilities as a result of the war.

John Francis, general passenger agent of the C. B. & Q. R. R. and a national figure in transportation, spoke briefly. Mr. O'Brien of the Consolidated Ticket Office entertained with several vocal selections.

The officers of the associat on are: President, S. A. Colpitts; vice-president, O. W. Hammond; secretary-treasurer, W. M. Macomber.

DR. MANN BOOMED FOR BISHOPRIC

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, is mentioned as the successor of the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh. The election will be held next Wednesday. Dr. Mann has been prominently spoken of several times for elevation to bishop and on one occasion refused to become bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Newark, N. J. Bishop N. S. Thomas of Wyoming and Bishop Herman Page of Spokane, Wash., are being seriously considered by the delegates.

CAR JUMPS SWITCH; TRAFFIC IS TIED UP

Traffic on the Park street-Lechmere square line was delayed ten minutes during the morning rush as result of a northbound surface car jumping a switch just outside of the Haymarket Square subway station. Passengers were jolted but no one was hurt.

When he does his amazing feats audiences rise from their seats and cheer:

Charles Hutchison
in Speed with Lucy Fox

He leaps from a dizzy cliff into the boiling rapids;
he hurls Lucy Fox from a racing motorcycle to a 40 mile an hour train, and then himself plunges with the motorcycle into the river below;
on horseback he jumps 40 feet from a wall into a deep ditch;
he fights an alligator with his bare hands;
he jumps from a flying airplane into the window of a speeding train!

Dear Boston:—

Just a few words of sincere thanks and appreciation before I go. You've been so kind to me, so extremely kind, that you must realize how sorry I am to leave.

It's all been so wonderful, and oh, I've been so perfectly happy through it all. I really wish I didn't have to say "goodbye," but I'm leaving next Saturday night by special train for New York.

Whatever you do please don't forget me, because I promise never to forget you.

With all my love, believe me,

Sincerely yours,

Opera Season Next Week to Draw Large Society Contingent, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE coming of the San Carlo Opera Company to Boston on Monday promises to afford the chief social excitement for the next two weeks.

Once more will the Boston Opera House reflect the glory of the days when Boston had an opera of its own. The huge auditorium will be filled with splendidly gowned and brilliantly jewelled women, while outside a long line of motors will stretch.

Among the smart matrons who have taken season tickets for the two weeks is Mrs. George Richmond Fearing, Jr., whose crown of auburn hair marks her wherever she goes. It was she who had charge of the large luncheon given recently by the Women's Republican Party at the Hotel Brunswick.

Others whose names appear on the subscription list are E. Sohier Welch, Howard Coonley, George W Brown, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Carl Kauffman (Elizabeth Cheney), Mrs. Walter L. Baylies, Franklin H. Beebe, Godfrey L. Cabot, Dr. Elbridge G. Cutler, Mrs. George R. Fearing, Sr., Courtney Guild, Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, Philip Saltonstall, Robert Winsor, Jr., Mrs. Solomon F. Stratton, Mrs. Henry B. Sprague and Mrs. Henry D. Tudor.

"Aida" will be the opera on Monday night, for which Mr. Gallo is bringing such stars as Mme. Rappold, Eleonora Cisneros, the mezz-soprano, and Mr. Salazar, the brilliant tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who have been especially engaged for the premier performance.

AMONG the Bostonians spending a few days in New York at the Ambassador Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Guy Murchie and Mrs H. William Beal.

OF light blue and silver was the gown which Miss Virginia Parker wore at the tea which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Parker, gave to introduce her on Friday afternoon.

Miss Parker, one of the prominent Junior League girls of the season, is tall and slender, with masses of dark, bobbed hair and very rich coloring. Her mother, whom the debutante resembles a good deal, received with her, wearing a gown of mahogany red and gold.

Sixteen of the young buds' more intimate friends, most of them Winsor classmates of hers, poured at the tea which was held at the Parkers' residence at No. 81 Mt. Vernon street. The Parkers have come in from the Chestnut Hill home to the Mt. Vernon street house, which they have leased for the Winter from the Charles Fiskes. Mrs. Fiske and her older daughter, Miss Nella Fiske, are spending the Winter abroad.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN R. THORNDIKE of Brookline are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son November 1. Previous to her marriage a year ago last June in New York, Mrs. Thorndike was Miss Caroline Wyeth, daughter of Mrs. Stephen G. Williams of New York. Mr. Thorndike is a son of Mrs. John L. Thorndike of Marlboro street.

"ARE Political Parties a Necessary Evil?" is the subject Professor Arthur Holcombe of Harvard has chosen to speak on at the next luncheon of the Junior League's legislative committee. These luncheons are held every Tuesday at the League's rooms on Boylston street.

Last week the various topics taken up were also of a decided political bent. Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch spoke, as did also Miss Leslie Richardson, Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Helen Bradley, Miss Peggy Porter and Mrs. Horace Gray. Most of them discussed the various candidates for the coming election, each speaker taking a different candidate.

MRS. EBEN STANDWOOD, Miss Faith Standwood and Mrs. Walter I. Badger have concluded their sojourn at Hot Springs, Va., and are returning to Boston.

PRINCE and Princess Michael Cantacuzene (Clarissa Curtis), who have been making their home in New York since their marriage a year ago last June, were recently of the guests for whom Mr. and Mrs. William Alexander entertained at dinner in the Louis XVI. suite at the St. Regis. Others in the company were Mrs. John Linzee, Miss Alice Van Rensselaer, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Giovanni Gregorini, the Countess Gregorini, Henry R. Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gilleaple.

HEARST MAN LEAVES FOR TURK PARLEY

Washington, Nov. 4.—Isaac Don Levine, newspaper correspondent, was in conference with President Harding for half an hour at the White House. Mr. Levine sails for Europe today on the Baltic. He will visit Russia and attend the Turkish peace conference as representative of the Hearst newspapers.

TODAY

Fascisti. The more the merrier.

As the ice breaks up in the Spring and starts floating, so old established, frozen kinds of government seem breaking up in Europe.

Parke-Davis, able chemists, believe they have discovered a virus to end rats by their own viciousness.

It is the vile character of the rat that destroys him, through cannibalism, as it is man's vicious character that destroys him and his civilization through war.

Give destructive bacteria to one rat. He becomes feeble. Immediately his brothers and sisters attack and devour him. They get the disease, they get sick, their brothers and sisters eat them.

A Prince Kropotkin has shown the higher animals are preserved by their "mutual aid." You learn now that the vilest of the animals are destroyed by their own cannibalism. Providence is very just. Man should take warning.

Under an old crabapple tree in New Jersey somebody murdered a man and a woman. And somebody—jealous woman, probably—cut the throat of the woman after she was dead. Now the crabapple tree has vanished, the whole thing taken away by crowds hunting "souvenirs." You couldn't imagine any kind of monkey doing that or any wild animal.

AUTHOR DODGES SHOT ON 5,000-MILE SEA TRIP

Providence, Nov. 4.—A thrilling 5,000-mile trip in a yawl from England to Greece and through the Mediterranean Sea was described by Arthur S. Hildebrand, New York novelist, who made the trip and who arrived here aboard the liner Canada.

Accompanied by H. M. Spencer, a Pennsylvania University alumnus, Hildebrand set out on a trip that lasted six months and was fraught with such dangers as dodging long range machine gun bullets when off Genoa, Italy, during a big strike.

LLOYD GEORGE APPEALS FOR CENTRE PARTY

London, Nov. 4.—(By the Associated Press)—David Lloyd George received a rousing reception from a great audience crowded into a motion picture theatre when he appeared to make a political speech today.

The speech was interpreted by many political experts as a strong plea for creation of a centre party in the new Parliament.

More than 25,000 persons had applied for the 3,000 available seats. Many notables and titled personages were among those in the audience. Lloyn George was surrounded by Lord Birkenhead, Austen Chamberlain and some others who were minisiers in his cabinet.

RETORTS TO LAW.

Lloyd George launched into his speech with an answer to Prime Minister Bonar Law's sarcastic characterization of him as a drummer boy. The little Welshman declared he was not ashamed of this description and added, amidst cheers that Germany lost the war because she had no drummer boy.

Referring to the Conservative watchword "tranquillity" Lloyd George declared that a policy of tranquillity was dangerous.

"It's not a policy, it's a yawn," he said.

WARNS OF EXTREMES.

"Avoid the extreme of Socialism," he said, "but do let us also avoid the extreme of standstillism.

"A great nation like ours cannot stand still. . . . You want a strong group of independent men free from party ties—strong enough to insist on a steady middle course free from all extremes."

Time Up Today for British Nominations

London, Nov. 4 (By the Associated Press).—All nominations for seats in the British Parliament must be in the hands of responsible officials today.

Everyone wondered if Lloyd George was really going to release his host of reserves and by eleventh-hour nominations fulfill his threat to spread the war against the Conservatives who overthrew him. So far 1,370 candidates have been nominated and of these only 170 are listed as National Liberals under the banner of Lloyd George, while the Conservatives, generally called Unionists, have 465 in the field. The Laborites are next, with 410, and the Independent Liberals, led by former Minister Asquith, have 325 candidates on their slate.

Irish Treaty Must Be Tried Out, Says Law

Leeds, England, Nov. 4 (By the Associated Press).—Prime Minister Bonar Law in addressing an audience of 3,000, said the view of the whole Unionist party was that the Anglo-Irish treaty be given a fair trial. "Those who are carrying on the government in Ireland may think," he said, "that the new government and the party that supports the new government is hostile in its heart. It isn't."

THAYER NAMED PERFECT BOY SCOUT

Austin L. Thayer, of No. 32 Broad street, Weymouth, was chosen by Dr. A. C. Benjamin of the Boston City Hospital as being the most perfect boy scout among the 150 scouts of the Old Colony Council of Boy Scouts of America.

Thayer is fifteen years old, weighs 150½ pounds, and stands five feet eleven inches in height. His nearest competitor was Burton Stetson, one of the scout leaders.

The result of the examination was given out just before the squad of eight boys under command of Scout Leader Burton Stetson left the Clapp Memorial Building for Mt. Blue-Hingham, where they entered the woods to stay until Sunday morning on a back-to-nature test.

'CARNIVAL' BY SYMPHONY IS AMUSING

The proverbial dignity of a Symphony audience was off duty yesterday afternoon when Mr. Monteux began to play the "Carnival of Animals" by Saint-Saens. It was much more than anybody could do or was expected to do to keep a straight face during the performance of this number.

The carnival, from start to finish, is delightful inorchestration and theme—sort of "animals came in two by two" effect put to music by a man who knew to perfection how to create effects. The concert tonight is worth going to hear for this, if nothing more.

The symphony was the Brahms in E minor. There are others that are more interesting than this one.

Perhaps in refutation of the stated lack of imaginative American composers, Mr. Monteux offered the Griffes "Clouds" and "The White Peacock." Both of these pieces are exquisitely lovely—delicate in handling but perfectly definite in outline. They are skilfully orchestrated as they would have to be to deserve their titles.

The final number on the program was the Glazounov "Stenka Razin."

GOING AT 40 MILES, HITS POLE

Revere Man Leading Police a Merry Chase at Time the Crash Occurred

Henry Flanagan of No. 38 Calumet street, Revere, is under arrest at Lynn today and will have to face a judge on a charge of speeding and failing to stop when policemen signaled.

But that's not the half of it. No matter what the judge decides to do with Henry, the worst is yet to come. For shortly before midnight yesterday Henry borrowed the brand new automobile of his father, Martin Flanagan. He invited his friend, John J. O'Sullivan of No. 76 Sagamore street, Revere, for a joy ride.

Shortly after 3 o'clock this morning, the brand new auto of Flanagan pere could be seen and heard booming through McDonough square in Lynn at better than forty miles an hour.

Patrolmen Murphy and Shanahan yelled to Flanagan to stop. Instead young Henry increased his speed and shot away. The patrolmen commandeered another auto and started in pursuit. The chase lasted for five miles. Papa Flanagan's new car showed its mettle and outdistanced the other auto. The youths might have safely made home were it not for a telegraph pole on School street, Revere.

When the policemen arrived they found what was left of the car against the pole, which had been moved almost a foot by the force of the collision. Neither of the young men had been seriously injured Henry was placed under arrest.

And when the judge gets through with him, Henry will have to face his father.

PRINCIPALS IN LOVE CONTEST IN BATTLE

When Miss Emma Beauparlant encountered Dan Cashman, wealthy Haverhill resident, from whom she asks $50,000 for breach of promise, a fist fight followed.

MISS BEAUPARLANT AND CASHMAN

Attacks Rich Son of Haverhill Man and Is Promptly Knocked Down

Haverhill, Nov. 4.—Daniel Cashman, son of Haverhill's wealthiest citizen, and defendant in a $50,000 breach of promise suit filed by Emma Beauparlant of No. 113 Winter street, was standing in Gammon's drug store on Washington square, chatting with a local clothing merchant.

His car was parked outside. While he was talking Miss Beauparlant, returning from work, passed the store. Noticing the auto, in which she claims to have been taken for many rides by young Cashman, she went in the store.

She walked up to Cashman.

"I suppose you're trying to frame somebody else now," she said.

And with that she clenched her fist and struck Cashman full in the face.

BLOW ON FACE

Cashman was ready with a come back. His own fist shot out, not as hard as it might have, perhaps, and caught her on the point of the chin. She reeled against a show case, and her chic hat bobbed down over her eyes.

Before the astonished bystanders could separate the two, they were at it again. They may have been engaged once, as Miss Beauparlant claims, but there was nothing at all to indicate it from their actions in the store.

PARTING TAUNT.

Finally Arthur Gammon, proprietor of the store, came in. He suggested to Miss Beauparlant that the air, outside, would do her a world of good. As she made her exit, Cashman flung after her a parting taunt:

"Now go tell this to the newspapers," he said.

Trial of her court case was postponed for six months when Cashman's attorneys filed a request for specifications about the alleged engagement.

TECH MEN IN HOTEL RIOT

13 Arrested as Drunk After Wild Celebration of Sophomore Victory

Two hundred jubilant, rollicking sophomores from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, wildly celebrating their victory over the freshmen in the annual interclass field day, descended on the Hotel Lenox shortly before midnight and raised such a disturbance that a riot call was sent for the police.

As a result thirteen of the students are under arrest charged with drunkenness. The rest were dispersed and sent to their homes.

The efforts of "Hightail John," famous waiter at the hotel, prevented a free-for-all fight from taking place. John, accustomed from long years of service in Boston to the vagaries of celebrating students managed to tone things down to some extent, at least, although a fair sized riot was staged despite his efforts.

When the police got to the hotel, some of the young students had gone out to Boylston street and were busy laying spare ties and bits of timber across the street car tracks in the hope of disrupting the service of the Boston Elevated. These young men were promptly collared and put into patrol wagons, while the officers went into the hotel to restore peace.

The students were promptly chased out of the hotel, and those most seriously incapacitated by liquor were lugged over to the Back Bay station. One spectator, who claimed no connection with Tech, but who had somehow caught the spirit of the thing, was also arrested.

Enosburg Falls Woman Declares Missing Couple on Way to Coast in Automobile

Enosburg Falls, Vt., Nov. 4.—Wallace E. V. Phelps, well-to-do bank president who disappeared on October 19, supposedly in company with Mrs. George Wood, wife of a truckman, left his wife just 21 cents when he went, it became known.

Phelps had a bank balance, at the time, of $3,800.21. Of this he drew out $2,800, leaving the balance for his wife.

It was also learned that he disposed of nearly $100,000 worth of property at very cheap prices in order to get ready cash together. It is reported that, so great was his hurry to sell this property, that he realized only about $10,000 on this sale.

ON AUTO TRIP.

Mrs. Phelps, who was extremely wrathy to discover that her wandering husband had left her only 21 cents to pay the bills, said that she is convinced he is on his way to California in an automobile.

Although Mrs. Phelps declares that Mrs. Wood on three other occasions has made trips to Canada with local residents, the woman's husband, George Wood, is strong in defence of his wife. He insists that she is merely visiting relatives in Connecticut, and is backed in this statement by his children.

POLICE DIFFER.

The police, however, have been unable to locate her in the Connecticut towns where her husband claims she went, and are convinced that he is mistaken.

The finances of Phelps' bank are perfectly sound, bank examiners say. His father-in-law has brought suit against him, but it is said that he left enough property unsold to cover all claims against him.

MOTHER LOSES HOME WHEN SON RUNS AWAY

Arthur Hooper.

It may interest Arthur Hooper—if he reads this—to know that his wanderlust has resulted in his aged mother, Mrs. Emily Hooper, losing her home at No. 7 Telford street, Brighton.

Arthur left home five weeks ago and since then has not been heard from. His mother, deprived of his support, was forced to leave her home. His uncle, George Hooper of Brighton, requests the Boston American to aid in the search for Arthur, who is seventeen years old. It is the second time the boy has run away, the uncle says.

Arthur is five feet, three inches tall, weighs about 125 pounds, has light hair, gray eyes and a broken index finger on the right hand. There are two slight scars on his temple.

WOODHOUSE JR. MAY BE CALLED TO TESTIFY

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 4.—While attorneys in the $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit brought against her parents-in-law by Mrs. Dorrit Woodhouse are arguing over the admissibility of documentary evidence well-defined rumors here have it that Douglas Woodhouse is in Burlington with Mrs. Lillian Hendricks McClellan of Washington.

Mrs. McClellan, according to the plaintiff's claim, is the woman who was selected by Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Woodhouse to make their son Douglas forget his young bride.

Nothing definite can be learned about the affair, but it is said that an expensive roadster sped into town late in the afternoon, with a well dressed man and a fashionably gowned young woman in the seat. The car bore a Washington license plate, and went at once to the Woodhouse mansion, where the occupants alighted.

If Douglas Woodhouse, husband of the youthful plaintiff in Vermont's biggest love suit, has actually returned to Burlington, it is possible that he may be called to testify. Mrs. Dorrit Woodhouse's attorney secured a deposition from him while he was in Reno, and this deposition is now one of the points at issue in the legal argument that has caused a suspension of public hearings until at least next Wednesday.

B. U. DEAN GOES ON TOUR OF COLLEGES

Dean James A. Beebe of Boston University School of Theology leaves today for a visit among the colleges of the Middle West, during which he will address the students and confer with those interested in theological work. His itinerary includes Allegheny College, Wesleyan, De Pauw, Baldwin - Wallace and Syracuse. Dean Beebe will return to Boston on or about November 15.

MRS. ROSIER TO CONTEST WILL OF HUSBAND

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Back home with her year-old buoy, after nine months in the county prison and passing through the ordeal of a long murder trial, Mrs. Catherine Rosier, acquitted of the charges of killing her husband and his stenographer was happy today but worn out. "Rest and forget," she said will be her plan for the present.

"It is just like walking out of a bad dream to find myself at home again," said the twenty three-year old widow today.

Mrs. Rosier's acquittal came after the jury had been out of the courtroom about an hour and forty-five minutes. "We could have acquitted her without leaving the room," said one juror.

Mrs. Rosier screamed and fainted when the verdict was announced.

It is expected that Mrs. Rosier will contest the will left by her husband leaving his $60,000 estate to his eleven-year-old son, Oscar, Jr., by a former wife, and Arthur Rosier brother of the dead man.

TOWN ARMS TO FIGHT DARING ARSON BAND

Middletown, R. I., Nov. 4.—This town is in a turmoil as the result of the activities of a group of vandals and incendiaries.

Within the past few weeks this gang has burned down a dozen houses, it is said, and caused much destruction of property.

Indignation has risen to such a high pitch that the men of the town have armed themselves and threatened to take the law into their own hands if Town Sergeant James Bloomfield does not arrest the offenders.

A mass meeting is to be held at which the resignation of Bloomfield will be demanded unless he breaks up the arson gang.

WHISKEY BANDITS MAKE $33,000 HAUL

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Prohibition agents today are scouring this vicinity for whiskey bandits who wheeled sixteen barrels of liquor, valued at $33,000, from a closed saloon while pedestrians looked on, believing them to be dry agents. The liquor was loaded on a big motor truck which immediately sped away.

AGED LODGER FOUND DEAD IN ROOM

Bernard Cooney, sixty-five years old, a lodger at No. 40 Lynde street, West End, was found dead on the floor of his room when the landlord, John Kalstein, went to look for him. Mr. Cooney was last seen on November 1. At that time he complained of a cold. The medical examiner has been notified. The police stated that they believe death was due to natural causes.

ASKS HABEAS FOR CHILD'S RELEASE

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus to get his daughter Mary, eleven years old, released from the Home for Destitute Catholic Children was filed in Supreme Court by John Waskus of Boston.

According to Waskus the child was placed in the home by an unknown person and he believes that the child should be placed in his custody.

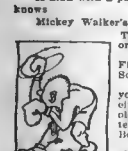
JACK PERRY TO BANK ON HIS PUNCH TO BEAT DAVE SHADE

WELTERS CLASH IN BIG TUSSLE AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

A man with a punch is always dangerous. Ask Jack Britton. He knows.

Mickey Walker's wallop won for him a world's championship.



The Elizabeth, N. J., youth is not much on science or so-called ring craft. But he can punch.

So could Stanley Ketchel, Terry McGovern, Bob Fitzsimmons and others who might be mentioned. So they climbed the ladder of success.

Jack Perry, Pittsburgh welterweight, is another youth who can punch. Like Walker he can hit with either hand. He will try to prove the value of the old wallop when he mingles with Dave Shade in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena Monday night.

Shade relies chiefly upon skill and speed to win, although he can hit heavily with his right when the opportunity presents itself. He proved this when he knocked out Pinkie Mitchell at Milwaukee and almost battered Eddie Shevlin out of the picture in the eighth round of their recent bout.

But Perry can punch harder than Shade. He is in the same class with Mickey Walker when it comes to dealing out the knockout drops.

The Pittsburgh puncher jars 'em with his left and drops 'em to the canvas with his right.

Eddie Shevlin had no much respect for Perry's ability as a socker that he backed away so much that he lost two decisions to the Pittsburgh man.

Shade says he won't give ground to Perry. Which should mean a slam-bang bout.

The winner of this match will be pitted against Eddie Shevlin.

Paul Doyle and George Ward will then receive an opportunity to show.

All of which should prove which of our noble welterweights has the best right to mingle with Mister Mickey Walker.

Pickles Martin to Show In the Semi-Final

Pickles Martin, lightweight champion of the Pacific Coast, will show in the semi-final of eight rounds. He will have Willie Gradwell of Somerville as an opponent.

Martin is a high-class fighter. He is appearing in the semi-final merely so as to introduce himself to Boston and New England fans. He feels that once the fans have seen him box that they will desire him back again in a main attraction.

This writer saw Pickles workout at the gym in Madison Square Garden the other day. He is a flashy performer and will please. Leo Flynn is his manager which means he's not dead wood.

Gradwell has beaten Frankie Britt, Harry Carlson and most of our other New England lightweights. He has even battled welterweights with credit to himself. He will give Martin a warm reception.

Young Tansey One of Our Promising Boys

Young Tansey of Roxbury, who boxes Charley Parker in the feature ten round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House, Tuesday night, is one of the most promising of our local boxers. He's been termed the kangaroo of the ring as a result of the way he sticks out his left hand and crouches. He's a fast, clever kid and has outpointed most of the opposition.

Parker, a stiff puncher, will give Tansey the hardest test he has yet had. Charley has had much more experience than his opponent, He's also won his last six bouts, which is another reason he's admirers look for him to upset the Tansey surge.

Another ten rounder will find Wild Bo Corbett facing Joe Curry of New Haven.

Then there will be a couple of eights, as well as election returns.

EDWARDS TO TAKE ON LONDON

New York, Nov. 4.—Harry London will try to again jump into the limelight when he mixes with the colored Jenson. Danny Edwards, in the star attraction at the Commonwealth this evening. London received a set back in his recent bout with Irish Johnny Curtin, but will try for a new start against Edwards.

ST. WILLIAM'S TO PLAY THE MOHAWKS

The St. William's Catholic Club of Dorchester and the Mohawks, also of Dorchester, will meet on the Savin Hill gridiron on Sunday. The game should be an interesting battle.

The Saints will be weakened tomorrow afternoon by the absence of McHugh with a broken collarbone, "Bunny" Keane, quarterback, "Chet" Ochs and "Collie" Durant, halfbacks. But Manager Connolly is confident of coming out on top.

FIGHT RESULTS

Al Salvo—Mike Castle was from Dick Sugge, on a foul, six rounds.

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 4—Dartmouth plays its last home contest when it tackles the strong Boston University eleven on Alumni Oval. Both Captain Burke of Dartmouth and Captain Toney of B. U. will watch the game from the side lines, where injuries are keeping them while the Green will be minus the services of one other regular, Eddie Lynch, the Green's brilliant right end.

Dartmouth throws all its available strength on the field, and is not under-rating the ability of the Bostonians at all, for Coach Wheeler's work has made a great impression in the Hanover camp.

Al Goldstein, sub-tackle, who was shifted to end last Tuesday, will be in Eddie Lynch's place, and "Cyn" Siegfried will start at right half in Captain Burke's place. Trainer Jack Watson announced that it might have been possible to use both Lynch and Burke, but with the high mark of the season, the game with Cornell only a week away, Dartmouth is taking no more chances on losing either man.

B. U. has two more men who are in doubtful physical condition in addition to Captain Toney in Koster and Williamson, but Dr. Whelan, a Dartmouth graduate, is so anxious to emulate the example of the two former Green stars coaching Vermont, Tom Keady and Norm Criss that he will throw every reserve into the fray.

Dartmouth is nearly in top form. After the day's rest at the first of the week the squad was started on the final drive down the home stretch and every man with the exception of the two injured regulars is in perfect physical condition. Most of the week has been spent in the development of the offence, the Green defence showing in its lax game that it could stop about anything that was sent against it.

Full of confidence after its victory over Vermont last Saturday, the Holy Cross eleven is all set to meet Georgetown at Washington this afternoon. Georgetown suffered its first defeat at the hands of the Quantico Marine team last Saturday, and is anxious to ship the Purple warriors home tagged with defeat.

Georgetown has a team that is as strong as that which defeated Holy Cross and Boston College last Fall, and although the Hilltoppers expect a hard game, they believe they will emerge from the contest victors.

Holy Cross has developed a passing game, which it hopes will enable it to gain successfully with the Capitollans. Quarterback Glennon will do the flinging for the Purple, as he can pass swiftly and accurately.

Georgetown is prepared for the Purple attack, and will rely on a stalwart backs to punch holes through the Purple line. Flavin, Kenyon and Malley will do most of the carrying.

Holy Cross has not been playing a consistent game and it is hard to judge how the Purple warriors will shape up against Georgetown. On the other hand, Georgetown has improved greatly since the opening of the season, and is expected to win easily over the visitors.

JACK McGRATH TO TACKLE CALZA

George Calza, the Italian champion, will again appear in the headline event of the weekly wrestling show staged by the Howard management at the Grand Opera House Thursday night. He will have as his opponent Jack McGrath, champion heavyweight wrestler of New England.

McGrath appeared on the same stage at the Grand and challenged the winner of the bout between Mort. Henderson and Calza.

Jack McGrath

McGrath lives in Worcester, and has met the best of the heavies. At the international wrestling tournament held in New York City he wrestled a two-hour draw with the present world's champion, Ed Lewis. McGrath has future matches in view with Stanislaus Zbyszko and Lewis. Jack weighs 225 and is over six feet in height so the pair are well matched in size.

In his appearance here last week, Calza showed a marked improvement in his work over last season. In addition to this he looks the picture of health. He knows more about the fine points of the game and is aggressive from start to finish.

Another new face to appear on the bill will be Young Maria, the new Italian sensation. This boy was brought over from Italy by Morando Stefani and is a personal friend of Calza's. He is the first wrestler to instruct Calza in the art of wrestling in Italy and intends to train him in all his important matches.

He will have as his opponent Mike Thomas, a Greek light heavyweight.

Boxer Wants Only $1 to Battle for Title

Terry Martin, or "Shine 'em up Terry" of Providence, has become a heretic. Terry wants the bantamweight crown, now in the strong box of Joe Lynch, at the worst way. To get it Terry came out with an announcement that he will fight Joe Lynch for the championship and only asks one dollar for his services. Nothing like this was ever heard of in pugilistic circles, and his revolutionary tactics will cause him to be scoffed in his profession. On the contrary, a fighter generally demands nearly as much as a champion, for he always figures it takes two to make a fight, and, therefore, is entitled to a fat recompense for his services.

ST. JAMES HIGH MUST FIGHT HARD TO WIN

Haverhill, Nov 4.—St. James High, unbeaten in 24 starts, lined up against the Leonard Hall High of Maryland, one of the best elevens in the South, at St. James Park today. With no other football attraction booked in this city a crowd of more than 10,000 was expected. Mayor James M Curley was a guest of the management.

The Baltimore boys come here unknown, but Coach Ed Carroll does not intend to let this game get away from him and has instructed his eleven to open up everything if necessary to win the game.

St. James will be greatly outweighed, as two of the visiting lineman weigh 190 and another weighs more than 180. St. James does not fear this weight for she has met some of the heaviest and best teams in the State and has defeated all. She has been coached for this game and has under-cover some dazzling plays.

Captain Ballr, quarterback for the visitors is the most feared man on the team. McHugh, another star, is a Massachusetts boy.

Broderick's trusty toe can be depended upon for a drop kick in the contest if a score is needed, and St. James has perfected a forward passing game that is dangerous.

SANDE LEADING U. S. JOCKEYS

Earl Sande, the jockey of the "million dollar" rides, is beyond question the great all-around rider in America today. He ranks with the star jockeys of former years and that includes McLoughlin Garrison, Mather, Sloan, Tarai, Loftus and other fa mous riders who have made notable careers on the running turf. Sande made himself extremely popular with the followers of the turf as much by his gentlemanly manners as his skill as a jockey.

TOMMY LEAHY OUT TO GET BYRON

Jackie Williams writes:

"Sailor Byron, lightweight champion of New England, and his manager know very well that Byron has not one chance in a hundred of entering the ring with Tommy Leahy without leaving his title on the brow of said Tommy. Tommy Leahy, the lightweight champion of Worcester County, has given Sailor Byron four opportunities to wrest the county championship from him.

Tommy Leahy.

"Byron failed in every attempt. It looks to me as though Byron is the lightweight champion of New England, barring the Heart of the Commonwealth where Leahy is still the Worcester County champion. Byron's manager has been trying to duck the issue, declaring Leahy a welterweight.

"Leahy is still a legitimate lightweight, but he has no much class as no lightweight in New England cares to box him, and rather than stay idle he will take on all the welterweights. Enclosed you will find a certified check for $500 which will take care of the lightweight situation. It is for a forfeit for a Leahy-Byron bout.

SOUTH'S BEST SCHOOL TEAM AT PEABODY

By FRED C. LANE.

The best from Dixie Land is in our midst. Charleston High of South Carolina, champions of the South, plays Peabody High, one of New England's strongest teams, at the new Peabody Athletic Field, this afternoon, in the first North and South contest this season.

The interest extends all over Tannerytown. Mayor Shea has declared a half holiday and every citizen will attend to witness Coach Brawley's team show their wares against the Dixie boys.

Charleston High beat Peabody last season when the Tanners made their trip South. Both scores were made on forward passes. Peabody's one tally was made by rushes.

Coach Brawley has drilled his lads in the aerial game all season.

The "Bantams," as they are known in their section, average about 149 pounds. The line is fast on attack.

Charleston High has not been scored on this season. They won their first four games and made a total of 139 points.

The Peabody team has a strong attack. Joe Lus and Pete Lapapa make a fine combination carrying the ball. Lus played fullback all season but will shift to a halfback to give Jackie Lawrence, rated the best schoolboy to ever wear the colors of Peabody, a chance to get back into action after a vacation.

Peabody has not been defeated this season. Marblehead and Salem have held them to no-score games, but neither threatened to score.

The Dixie boys have won several victories on loose balls. Coach Carl Prause has trained his squad in this line.

The game is the biggest sport event in the North Shore in years. It is scheduled to start at 2:30.

Fall River, Nov. 4.—Tommy Ryan, of McKeesport, Pa., obtained the decision against Billy Marlow, of New York, in a ten-round bout at the Casino A. C.

In the semi-final of eight rounds Charlie Baxter, of Providence, defeated Georgie Vanderbilt of this city.

NEWBURYPORT HAS BIGGEST GRID TILT

Newburyport, Nov. 4—The game between Newburyport High and Salem High today will be the principal contest here this season.

Newburyport lost to Salem in the Witch City last year, 16 to 0. Newburyport's excellent work in the game at Lawrence, which Salem beaten, shows that it has the fight and the confidence of a winner.

The local team will have all of its regulars on hand. Coach Star King has the preparations practically completed for the day's event and almost the last word has been said to the team and they know what is expected.

The officials will be J. C. Twomey of Harvard, referee; Fred Peterson, who was captain of Colgate and played centre in 1913, ump; and George Martinson of Salem, head linesman.

HARVARD STARTS SECOND STRING ELEVEN AGAINST FLORIDA

PERCY JENKINS ONLY REGULAR AT START

Harvard will start a second string eleven, all Massachusetts men, in the Stadium this afternoon. The Gators hope to [illegible] against the Crimson.

Williams, Post, Cochran, Pfaffman, Fullbright, Harlow and Pinkham are held in reserve ready to take on their share of work in their respective positions if Florida shows too much strength.

"We have arranged this game with Harvard to Put Florida University on the map, and we hope to make a good showing," are the words of Coach W. G. Kline, former Illinois star, after reaching Soldiers Field for practice.

Several first eleven players will find their way to the Yale-Brown game, and others will journey South to the Princeton-Swarthmore fray.

Belief in the theory that Florida does not know the fundamentals of the gridiron game is given for the reason stars are taking it easy.

If Florida springs some trick plays, they may surprise the Harvard students and beat the Crimson.

The Harvard subs have not been counted on much this season. It is the chance of their [illegible] son to show off before their coaches and some may do such dazzling work that they will be counted on to figure in the Princeton, Brown or Yale games.

Percy Jenkins is the only regular on the team. He is doing it in order that he may get as much practice in the position that he recently took over from Roscoe Fitts, now on the second eleven. Roscoe may go in after Jenkins has finished his work.

Coach Kline also added, "I do not think that the weather will bother the players at all. You can see we have a rugged squad and I consider it easily the best team that I have had in three years at Florida. John A. Murphree, son of the university president, is sure to get into the game to call signals at some time. We are planning to adopt a kicking game, with Dickson and Newton sharing these duties.

ELI UNCERTAIN ABOUT ONE POSITION

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 4—Although clearing weather is promised for the Brown game, the Yale team took the signal rehearsal under adverse conditions.

Head Coach Tad Jones said this noon that the left halfback is uncertain. He is undecided between Ted Wight and "Widdy" Neale, not because of the personal equation but because he has not determined whether Yale will be ordered to attempt a punting or a line breaking game.

The Eli coaches last night discussed at length the plan of resorting to a kicking game and sending Wight to the backfield. They used him yesterday as a first-string back for the first time this season.

If they finally determine that Yale's policy will be their hitherto line plunging specialty, Neale will get the assignment.

There is no Brown money in sight and Yale's previous victory of 45 to 7 has dampened any money offerings. A crowd of 40,000 is assured in case of favorable weather.

Yale expects Brown to pin its scoring hopes upon long forward passes and has devoted much of its practice time the past week to perfecting a defence for the aerials used last Saturday by Brown against Boston University.

FLORIDA'S PRESIDENT LEADS THE 'GATORS

PICK BOSTON COLLEGE TO WIN EASILY

"We will give the best that is in us," is the promise of the Villanova team, which plays Boston College at Braves Field this afternoon. Whether this means that Villanova will win by three touchdowns or lose by a like number, can only be learned this afternoon. Whatever it means, Villanova should furnish the Eagle with a full hour of scrapping, as the Pennsylvania eleven is no ordinary team.

The visitors are somewhat handicapped by the punishment they received in the Holy Cross game three weeks ago. The Purple eleven fought without a score for half the game, and only by the hardest kind of playing were O'Donnell's men able to score.

Daly and Cronin, who will start against Boston, are suffering from injured ankles, which may slow them up a bit. Strdewan, who is playing in place of McLaren, who was injured in the Gettysburg game, has a bad left leg, but will start the game and play as long as he is able to stand.

Villanova believes its line to be impregnable. Not a single first down has been made by any opponent through the line. All scores by the opposition has been made either by long runs around the end, or forward passes, or by the recovery of fumbles.

Coach Wood, of Penn State, declared that Villanova has a line that is 50 per cent better than that of the Penn team. He expressed his surprise that Villanova, with such a line, did not stand higher in the lists of Intercollegiate football.

Explanation Is Foun'
in the Back Field

The explanation of Villanova's failure to rank higher, than it does, is found in the backfield. The backfield is not to be compared to the Yankee ball club, both are composed of stars. There is a deplorable lack of organization among the backs, and no wicked team work. the best backfield in the world cannot get very far.

The Villanova backfield that plays today is an entirely new combination. It has never played together even in a rehearsal. Yesterday's practice consisted only of a signal drill. What the new combination will be able to do against the Eagle is a matter of conjecture.

Allie Miller, who coaches the Villanova team, feels that h n new back field will give a good account of itself. He has developed the short forward pass over the line to a high point of perfection, and will in all probability use this play extensively this afternoon.

McLaren May Be Able to Play at Fullback

McLaren may be able to get into the game at fullback for a short period. Last night Young Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, the Villanova trainer, spent some little time baking McLaren's leg in an effort to put him in shape for the game. McLaren is the brightest of the backfield stars, and his presence would strengthen the visitors' backfield considerably.

Allie Miller, the Villanova coach is a brother of Heinie Miller. Both brothers were wingmen on the Penn team a few years back. Lew Little line coach, is another Penn man and a former All American tackle.

The men are responsible for the wonderful strength of the visitors' line. It is unfortunate that there is not a little more co-operation in the backfield, for a smoothly working quartet of backs behind such a line would be sure to make the best teams travel.

Coach Cavanaugh has great respect for the Villanova team, and made sure that his men would not become too confident of victory. He has drilled the Eagle line and backfield so that the B. C. warriors will be able to handle the visitors' best attack.

Frank Wilson, who will play fullback for Boston College, will perhaps be called on to do the kicking in today's game. Wilson can boot the pigskin as well as Donnellan, and at times a little better.

Almost Sure That
Darling Will Play

It is almost a certainty that "Chuck" Darling will be in the game today at least for a period. He seems to have fully recovered, and went through the whole practice session yesterday.

Darling, with his long range kicking leg, will be ready to step in the game if Wilson or Donnellan are unable to get off punts for a good distance.

If the Villanova line proves to be impregnable against the attack of Ward and Cronin, Donnellan may try to duplicate his practice boots of Wednesday, when he dropped kicked successfully from the 40-yard line, seventeen times out of eighteen tries.

The undefeated Cornell team is a favorite in the battle with Columbia. Columbia has a strong team, however, and has lost only one game this season.

The Cornell machine has worked very smoothly against its early season opponents, but it had no real test until the Colgate game. Colgate, although it lost to Cornell, showed that Cornell's attack is not so strong as the scores against weak teams seems to indicate.

Coach O'Neil, of Columbia, is anxious to defeat Cornell, and has driven his men to the limit in preparing for the game.

Columbia has a powerful backfield, and may upset the dope by splitting Cornell this afternoon. Gehrig, Columbia's heavy halfback, may start the game at guard, while he will be replaced by Canaparry, who captained Columbia in 1919.

Columbia is pinning lots of hope on Ben Roderick, the former Boston College star, to smash the Cornell line. As both teams are in fine fettle for the fray, it ought to provide plenty of thrills.

Princeton will play Swarthmore. It will be a rest-up game after the Chicago contest. The Tiger should have no trouble with Swarthmore, and the Pennsylvania eleven should give Princeton nothing more than a light workout in preparation for the Harvard game.

Swarthmore is a hard fighting eleven, but is hardly equipped with strength enough to hunt big game like the Princeton Tigers. Princeton will probably show those members of the Harvard first team who are reported will watch the game, very little of its real battle plans.

Dartmouth does not undgrate the Boston University eleven which will clash with the Green this afternoon at Hanover. Coach Cannell has spent much time with the Green team developing the defence and strengthening the backfield.

Boston University is somewhat handicapped by the loss of Fullback Tonry, but is full of fight and hopes to make a good showing. Coach Whelan has paid particular attention to perfecting the B. U. passing game, and with their backfield lacking its full strength, the Back Bay eleven is expected to resort largely to the open game.

Captain Burke will start the game with the Green eleven. He will be displaced, most probably after a period or two by Seigfred. Although Lynch will start at right wing, Goldstein will also play that position. Goldstein has made a fine showing in practice, and is one of the Green's best men on the receiving end of forward passes.

O'ROURKE HAS BIG MATCH FOR DEC. 6

New York, Nov. 4 — Tom O'Rourke, matchmaker of the Republic A. C., has matched Floyd Johnson against K. O. Bill Brennan to battle fifteen rounds on December 6. The bout will be held at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory.

When reminded that the court had not yet ordered the Boxing Commission to transfer the license of the Republic A. C., O'Rourke replied:

"We'll win in court all right."

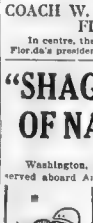
"SHAGGY" CULLEN HERO OF NAVY GRID VICTORY

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4.—Extra helping of puddin' are being served aboard American battleships the world over, for at American League park the middies from Annapolis revenged its single 1921 defeat by taking Penn State to the tune of 14 to 0.

A forty-two-yard drive, featured with three thrilling forward passes and a recovered Penn State fumble led to a brace of Annapolis touchdowns and the point following touchdown, which was scored in each case, gave the Middies their winning total.

The forty two-yard drive came in the middle of the second period, the recovered fumble came late in the third session of play, and to the great delight of the home folks here in Washington the fellow who figured most prominently in each case was "Coll" Cullen, a recent graduate of Washington Central High School.



Cullen was on the receiving end of the pass which scored the initial counter and he was the youth who scooped up the Penn State fumble and ran seventeen yards to the second, and Cullen, in addition, did many other things that aided the Navy to the commanding position and did many more things to keep the Navy in that position. It was a great day for the local youth, and Washington folks are pretty proud of this rising citizen.

That 14 to 0 outcome marked the first Penn State defeat in three years, three years in which they have engaged the toughest foes, week after week, and took entirely away the perkiness of the Nittany lion of State College, Pa.

It indicated one of two things, either the gang is getting wise to Weakened by the loss of Galvanski and Eteiman, the Tufts eleven will play Middlebury at Middlebury Vt., this afternoon. The Jumbo team had been traveling at a high rate of speed under the direction of Coach Casey, but suffered its first defeat from Wesleyan last Saturday.

Middlebury has a strong team and expects to put another belt in the Elephant's hide. Against the strong Middlebury line, Tufts will employ an overhead attack.

As Stelman's leg still bothers him, and Martin, the next quarterback in line is suffering from a heavy cold Kastarl will probably direct the Tufts play.

Kastarl, work during the week shows that he has a fair amount of field generalship and lacks only experience.

Middlebury has developed several new formations for the Tufts game and Coach Morey believes that his team will conquer the Brown and Blue.

DARTMOUTH MAKES A PERFECT SCORE

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 4—Dartmouth's cross-country team made a perfect score against Middlebury in a dual meet over the local six-mile course. All six of Dartmouth's scoring runners leading the first Middlebury man across the line. Five Green harriers tied for first place. The score was 15-51. The summary:

Tie for first—Young, Osgood, Nason, Winsor, Latimer, (Dartmouth), 6 Fudall (D), 7; Cook (M), 8; Jerman (D), 9; Kendall (M), 10; Palmer (M), 11; Garred (D), 12; Shelvey (M), 13, Robinson (M).

Holy Cross tumbled the Vermont eleven down to earth again after Tom Keady's men had gone riding on the fleecy clouds when they defeated Dartmouth. Today the Vermont team is in better mental shape for the game with New Hampshire State.

Vermont should have an easy time disposing of its rivals, as the New Hampshire team is shot full of holes with injuries. For this reason New Hampshire will use plenty of subs.

Driscoll and Johnson on the Vermont team are out with injuries, and Gooch will shift from halfback to quarter. Tarpey will play at full back in Johnson's place.

Coach Keady has strengthened the Vermont defence, and has no fear that New Hampshire will be able to break through his line.

MANCHESTER IS WILD ON HAVERHILL GAME

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 4—All Manchester is football mad because of the game with Haverhill High. The game is the biggest home contest on the local schedule, and drew a crowd of over 12 000 people to Textile Field this afternoon. A huge mass meeting was held, at which Mayor Trudel headed a list of prominent city officials who spoke.

School committeemen propose an inter-sectional game in the South or West if Manchester defeats Haverhill.

The local team has won all of its games thus far this season.

LONDON MALES OFF, FEMALES INCREASE

London, Nov. 4—The latest census gives the number of inhabitants of Greater London as 7,480,261, the highest on record. The clash of Somerville High and Medford at Fulton Field today brings together two old football rivals of the Suburban League these two schools have offered their best when in conflict.

Somerville has not won over Medford since 1909, when Jim Robertson, later of Dartmouth, intercepted a Medford forward pass and raced for the only score of the game.

Somerville surprised those closely connected with scholastic sports by taking a commanding lead in this year's league fight. Never was the Red and Black team in better condition to put over a victory.

New York Nov 4—At the Polo Grounds today, Lafayette and Washington & Jefferson, two teams undefeated for two seasons will clash in one of the biggest games in the East. Each have seventeen straight games, and is a pretender to the Eastern College championship title.

Those who saw Lafayette slay Boston College last Saturday, feel that it will take an exceptionally brilliant team to defeat Commons. The deceptive double and triple pass plays which wrought such havoc with the Eagle defence are expected to dazzle W. & J. likewise.

Frothingham Phibbs on the Primrose Path of Courtship

By N. N. D.

"THE poets say 'love makes the world go round,' ventured Amanda Phibbs apropos of nothing at all, but feeling extremely sentimental because a society girl had just eloped with a mousman, in defiance of her father's wishes.

"Huh?" retorted Frothingham, looking up from the sporting page. "Love may make the world go round, but a couple of drinks of home brew can do the stunt much more effectively!"

"Oh, you're impossible!" stormed Amanda. "You're forever bringing up liquor and love in the same breath!"

"And why not? Don't both get a fellow intoxicated? When a man's drunk he'll do most anything for no reason at all, and when he's in love he does the same."

"Now I suppose you'll tell me that you proposed to me when you were intoxicated?" demanded the miss.

"Maybe not, but you'll have to admit that my head was in a whirl at the time," replied the master of the household, with an air.

"I'll have you understand that love is the most beautiful thing in the world. It makes one see things in life that never existed for them before. Haven't you found it so?"

"Yes," assented Phibbs, with a knowing laugh, "I've seen many things that never existed."

"Take the famous women in history like Helen of Troy, Cleopatra and Charlotte Corday," continued on the missus, lost for the moment in the poets swing of her cogitations, "they give their all in the name of Love."

"Yes, Charlotte Corday even lost her head over it, which proves that love cuts off several years of one's life. Love may be all right in the story books, my dear, but how can it be beneficial to mankind when it leads to marriage?"

"Marriage," informed the missus, quite excited, "is the poetry of civilization."

"And a wife, I presume, supplies all the prose talk. Love may be a fine thing, but it's parted many true friends at the altar as they marched down the aisle to the strain of a wedding tune. Thereafter, it's the household tune that's strained," finished up Frothy with much gusto.

Just then the doorbell rang and Sally Green, her face white, ran into the house excitedly.

"Oh, I don't know what to do," she cried, grief-stricken. "Bob proposed to me a little while ago, and when I refused him he dashed out of the house swearing he'd kill himself."

"I thought you loved him?" asked Amada, thrilled by the romantic possibilities of the situation.

"I do," returned Sally, "but he proposes so delightfully I wanted him to do it over and over again every night, so I refuse him all the time. Oh, do you think he'll take his life, Mr. Phibbs? You're a man—you ought to know."

"No," assured Phibbs, "he won't commit suicide. He can give up his life with less publicity by marrying."

Both women gave Frothy a look that only the daughters of love know how to bestow on ribless man and went into the next room to console each other while Phibbs felt he needed a drink—of water.

ETIQUETTE ON THE STREET

By Les Conklin

WHEN walking on the sidewalk with a girl it is advisable to keep on the inside. If she gets a chance to look at the store window she will want you to buy everything in sight for her.

If you are accompanying a girls, etiquette says that you must walk on the outside. However, if they are extremely good looking, you will find it much more desirable to walk in the middle.

If you meet a female acquaintance on the street, do not embrace her unless you are old friends. According to the Marquis of Queensbury rules, embraces are limited to thirty seconds. Watch out for hat pins and sharp edged jewelry. If you step on each other's toes, etiquette says that you must let the woman scream first.

Always recognize all acquaintances except bill collectors, old clothes men and street cleaners. Avoid pickpockets, dark streets and policemen.

Do not take a girl near a hotel grill, theatre or tea room unless you have just won a long shot on the races. For a pleasant walk, suggest a stroll through the park to the Automat.

If a hold-up man stops you, remember the remark of the drowning sea captain: "Women and children first."

DO YOU KNOW THAT YOU ARE WEARING YOURSELF OUT?

1922, by International Feature Service, Inc.

Passed the sunny side of life and compelled to work to maintain life, you sometimes wish you might relax and go at the reduced speed which your years demand.

If you did, however, you would soon lose your position, and you know it.

You know also that you are drawing more energy than you can supply and yet you cannot let down a bit.

You would like to be more sedate and more moderate in every way as other men of your age can and most of them do.

You wish you might take things easy, if you have enough to meet your needs.

But you must not do it.

It would make you grow old and wear out twice as fast.

It is because so many men do slow down that they finally rust out.

Accustomed to greater activity they do not order their social life and their eating to correspond to the lesser activity, and the first thing they know they have gone.

If you take proper care of yourself, getting more sleep, for you require more than you did as a young fellow, and finding out how to restrict your diet, you can keep up a pretty stiff pace for years.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super Motion Pictures Which Are Now Showing at the Park Theatre

By Charles Major

THE door was soon broken down, and the king walked in first, with de Longueville and Wolsey next, and the rest of us followed in close procession. But we marched over broken walls to the most laughable defeat ever suffered by besieging army. Our foe, though small, was altogether too fertile in expedient for us. There seemed no way to conquer this girl; her resources were so inexhaustible that in the moment of your expected victory success was turned into defeat; nay, more, ridiculous disaster.

We found Jane crouching on the floor in a corner half dead with fright from the noise and tumult—and where do you think we found her mistress? Frightened? Not at all, she was lying in bed with her face to the wall as cool as a January morning; her clothing in a little heap in the middle of the room.

Without turning her head, she exclaimed: "Come in, brother you are quite welcome. Bring in your friends; I am ready to receive them, though not in court attire, as you see." And she thrust her bare arm straight up from the bed to prove her words. You should have seen the Frenchman's little black eyes gloat on its beauty.

Mary went on, still looking toward the wall: "I will arise and receive you all informally, if you will but wait."

This disconcerted the imperturbable Henry, who was about at his wit's end.

"Be not impatient, brother mine! I will jump out in just a moment."

A little scream from Jane startled everybody, and she quickly ran up to the king, saying: "I beg your majesty to do. She will do as she says so sure as you remain, you don't know her; she is very angry. Please go; I will bring her down at any moment."

"Ah, indeed! Jane Bolingbroke," came from the bed. "I will receive my guests myself when they are kind enough to come to my room." The coverlid began to move, and, whether or not she was going to carry out her threat, I cannot say, but Henry, knowing her too well to risk it, hurried us all out of the room and marched down stairs at the head of his defeated cohorts. He was swearing in a way to make a priest's flesh creep, and pounding by everything holy that Mary should be the wife of Louis or die. He went back to Mary a room at intervals, but there was enough persistence in that one girl to stop the wheels of time, if she but set herself to do it, and the king came away from each visit the victim of another rout.

Finally his anger cooled and he became amused. From the last visit he came down laughing

"I shall have to give up the fight or else put my armor on with visor down," he said: "it is not safe to go near her without it: she is a very vixen, and but now tried to scratch my eyes out."

Wolsey, who had a wonderful knack for finding the easiest means to a difficult end, took Henry off to a window where they held a whispered conversation.

It was pathetic to see a mighty king and his great minister of state consulting and planning against one poor girl, and an army as I felt toward Mary, I could not help pitying her, and admired, beyond the power of pen to write, the valiant and for her impregnable defence she had put up against an array of strength that would have made a king tremble on his throne.

Princess Mary scorns the necklace sent by King Louis

Presently Henry gave one of his long laughs, and slapped his thigh as if highly satisfied with some proposition of Wolsey's.

"Make ready at once," he said. "We will go back to London."

In a short time we were all at the main stairway ready to mount for the return trip.

The Lady Mary's window was just above, and I saw Jane watching us as we rode away.

After we were well out of Mary's sight the king called me to him, and he, together with de Longueville, Wolsey and myself, turned our horses' heads, rode rapidly by a circuitous path back to another door of the castle and re-entered without the knowledge of any of the inmates.

We four remained in silence, enjoined by the king, and in the course of an hour, the princess, supposing every one had gone, came downstairs and walked into the room where we were waiting.

It was a scurvy trick, and I felt a contempt for the man who had planned it. I could see that Mary's first impulse was to beat a hasty retreat back into her citadel, the bed, but in truth she had in her make-up very little disposition to retreat. She was clear grit. What a man she would have made! But what a crime it would have been in nature to have spoiled so perfect a woman. How beautiful she was! She threw one quick, surprised glance at her brother and his companion, and lifting up her exquisite head carelessly hummed a little tune under her breath as she marched to the other end of the room with a gait that Juno herself could not have improved upon

I saw the king smile, half in pride of her, and half in amusement, and the Frenchman's little eyes feasted upon her beauty with a relish that could not be mistaken.

Henry and the ambassador spoke a word in whisper, when the latter took a box from a huge side pocket, and started across the room toward Mary with the king at his heels.

Her side was toward them when they came up, but she kept her attitude as if she had been of bronze. She had taken up a book that was lying on the table and was examining it as they approached

De Longueville held the box in his hand, and bowing and scraping said in broken English: "Permit to me, most gracious princess, that I may have the honor to offer on behalf of my august master, this little testament of his high admiration and love." With this he bowed again, smiled like a crack in a piece of old parchment, and held his box toward Mary. It was open, probably in the hope of enticing her with a sight of its contents—a beautiful diamond necklace.

She turned her face ever so little and took it all in with one contemptuous, sneering glance out of the corners of her eyes. Then quietly reaching out her hand she grasped the necklace and deliberately dashed it in poor old de Longueville's face.

"There is my answer, sir! Go home and tell your imbecile old master I scorn his suit and hate him—hate him—hate him!" Then with the tears falling unheeded down her cheeks, "Master Wolsey, you butcher's cur! This trick was of your conception: the others had not brains enough to think of it. Are you not proud to have outwitted one poor heart-broken girl? But beware, sir; I tell you now I will be quits with you yet, or my name is not Mary."

There is a limit to the best of feminine nerve, and at that limit should always be found a flood of healthful tears. Mary had reached it when she threw the necklace and shot her bolt at Wolsey, so she broke down and hastily left the room.

The king, of course, was beside himself with rage.

"By God's soul," he swore, "she shall marry Louis of France, or I will have her whipped to death on the Smithfield pillory." And in his wicked heart—as impervious to a single lasting good impulse—he really meant it.

Immediately after this, the king, de Longueville and Wolsey set out for London.

I remained behind hoping to see the grim, and after a short time a page plucked me by the sleeve, saying the princess wished to see me.

The page conducted me to the same room in which had been fought the battle with Mary in bed. The door had been placed on its hinges again, but the bed was tumbled as Mary had left it, and the room was in great disorder.

"Oh, Sir Edwin," began Mary, who was weeping, "was ever woman in such frightful trouble? My brother is killing me. Can he not see that I could not live through a week of this marriage? And I have been deserted by all my friends, too, except my Jane. She, poor thing, cannot leave."

"You know I would not go," said Jane, parenthetically. Mary continued: "You, too, have been borne an entire week and have not been near me"

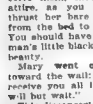
World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

DAILY SHORT STORY--CONFIDENCE GAME

By Hertha R. McDonald

"WHAT you need most, Dick Dermody, is a good, stiff dose of self-confidence!" Thus spake the oracle, and Dick, as was his custom, took issue with his wife at once.



WHAT DO YOU MEAN, CONFIDENCE? SAYS MY WIFE HOW THEY'RE THERE STEADILY — sliding down hill! There's only one cylinder in the Borton machine that's allowed to do any of the real work, and that's the old man's nephew. What he doesn't know isn't allowed inside the works, and the poor boob is so empty he rattles—

"Dickie, dear," interrupted his wife, "it won't do a bit of good to grow bitter. There must be some way to reach Mr. Borton, to make him realize your worth, to pay you accordingly, and we've got to find it. I know you better than you do yourself. I know as well as if I'd been there that it took no more than a steady look from Borton to shut you up like a clam."

"Perhaps. But you wouldn't find it so easy to exploit yourself to a man who repeals over and over that money talks."

Molly Dermody as the door closed after her husband, sat down to some serious thinking. Expenses were increasing daily and her husband's inability to stem the tide seemed traveling in an inverse ratio. She was confident Dick had skills, but his timing of self-effacement was so over-developed she despaired at times of his ever having a chance at the sunlight.

It was two weeks later that an excited little woman waited impatiently for her husband's home-coming, and with difficulty restrained an outcry when she saw him coming up the walk. He greeted her impassively and passed on into the house, much in the same manner in which he had performed a like feat three hundred and sixty-four similar days in the year.

When she could no longer endure his gloomy silence she asked casually, "How was every little thing today, Dickie?"

"Rotten!" he answered with a growl "Always rotten. I hate the darn place' If I had a thousand dollars to live on while I hunted another job, I'd partake of the satisfaction of talking turkey to that old bunch of bones!"

"Dickie!" exclaim-l Molly, grabbing at his sleeve. "Do you mean that?"

"Mean that? Of course I mean it! Do you suppose I'm talking just because I like the noise?" He looked up into her face and something he saw there arrested the sneer which was about to disfigure his honest countenance. "Why?" he went on wonderingly. "What have you on your mind, anyway?"

Because—oh Dick! Dickie! I've hoped and prayed for so long you'd get up backbone enough to tell them what's what at Bortons and if—if a thousand dollars will make you do it—why—you can start in tomorrow morning."

"Say, what the Sam Patch has got into you, Molly? You talk crazy I suppose you've got a thousand buried somewhere, haven't you?"

"No, but—I know you'll be surprised. The Clarion Daily, back home in Springfield, offered a prize for the best slogan to be used as the town's business motto, and mine—mine was the best."

"Molly! You don't mean it! A cool thou! What was this wise bit?"

"Let every man give the best there is in him, for every honest purpose at any time"

"That's a crackerjack! I'm going down tomorrow morning and repeat that to Borton. I'm going to tell him that's always been my motto—in vain, it seems they don't seem to recognize the service. I'll tell him a lot more, and if he doesn't like it I'll tell him to go straight to—to Dan's."

Again, the following evening, Molly Dermody waited impatiently for her husband. She had watched him leave in the morning, a brighter look in his eyes and more spring in his step and her heart smote her. What if the scheme didn't work out after all? But when he came she saw, even from afar, that which bade her hope.

He came as a triumphant warrior might, fresh from honestly won battles. He strode up the walk and into the house as though he were monarch of all about him, and Molly's heart sang. "Don't wait—tell me, tell me everything, dear!" she begged.

"Easiest thing I ever pulled, Mollykins. I simply told that old sawhorse if he wanted to retain my services in that joint there were several reforms that would have to go through instantly. I also put him wise to the fact there wasn't room for his darling nephew and yours truly on the same lot, and he could take his choice. Lastly I talked salary increase, and—"

"Yes, dear, I know, but what did Borton say?"

"Him? He said I needn't get sore about it; that all I needed to have done at any time was to mention my complaints, and—oh, we—the long and short of it is I'm manager of my department, with a 30 per cent. salary increase, beginning today, and dear nevvy is outside the gates!"

The next morning, after the newly created monarch had left for his office, poor Molly sat down again to think. This time she was wondering how she ever was going to muster courage to tell Dick that her effort, humbly submitted to the Springfield Clarion with so much hope, never had been heard from. She wondered just what the effect would be when Dick discovered his house of courage had been built not upon the staunch rock of dollars and cents, but instead upon the sand of lies.

In the midst of her reverie the bell rang and she went to collect the letters from the postman. Dully she ran them over until she came to an envelope bearing the return card of the Springfield Clarion and addressed to Mrs. Richard Dermody. With fingers which trembled so that she could scarcely hold it, she opened the envelope and read the following letter:

"Dear Mrs. Dermody—

"We thank you for your interest in the Clarion's contest and are happy to award you ten dollars (check enclosed) as a prize. Yours, very truly, Publishers Springfield Clarion."

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—By ANN LISLE

IF Jim becomes a partisan in a quarrel he's likely to upset the participants

"AREN'T YOU GOING TO MAKE YOURSELF SOME FOR YOUR ADMIRER?"

Now which of his sisters will Jim uphold? Will he stand by Virginia? Or will he be treacherous and join with Little Phoebe?

After Virginia had pleaded me mood to say nothing of her injured feelings Jim turned upon me curtly and cried out in a playful tone

"Aren't you going to make yourself some for your admirer?

"Jeanie—you did listen to that horrid Cordova after all," I said ruefully.

"Guilty!" cried Virginia in high delight, adding in mock heroic whisper: "Guilty of a lack of sense of humor. I never have thought it of you, Anne"

"Rosa Grains it out of me." I confessed "She delights in setting and distorting things. She makes me lose my prospective. S why shouldn't she destroy yours especially when she is trying to your first impression on a subject never before heard discussed"

"Moaning Mr. Lacy," cried Virginia tersely. "Anne, I m no prude. I believe that married people feel all the more loyalty and faith and devotion when they have a little freedom. I'd be very happy if I thought Pat was ever going to be one grain less devoted to that ing fine Carlotta Sturges. I think people ar horrid if they can't confess a man and woman a useful friendship such as two men or two women have. Tony is my friend.

"No, dear. Of course no" I agreed astonished at having Virginia take the very viewpoint I'd expressed to Rosa, and eager to have her go on.

"Well aren't you about as—decent a sort as I am?" laughed Virginia, adding gaily, "I'll say so"

That doesn't make Pat one jot less—my man."

Meaning that I'm entitled to make friends with the advertising manager of the Star if I like?" I said, dropping her a little curtsey.

"Meaning just that," Virginia agreed, her voice growing very tender and sweet as she went on to say: "Dear, Pat and I both feel that this long absence of Jim is an agonizing thing. Now that I've begun to be fair in my mind to things I don't fully sympathize with in my heart, I'm almost glad you have your business. After all, Penelope is said to have done a lot of spinning while waiting for Ulysses."

"You adorable thing," I said, almost singing it with a high heart. "You're reconciled to my being a working woman at last!"

"Things have happened" which make me glad you have your job," replied Virginia. "You need something to—keep you in trim. There's no reason why you, too, shouldn't have varied friends"

Something in my brain seemed to take alarm at her tone. It was on the tip of my tongue to ask Virginia if the thing that made her glad I had my job was built of cobwebs spun by Rosa Cordova. But Hedwig's voice interrupted us

"Mr. Parkinson and Mr. Lacy," she announced, ushering them in hard upon her words.

Even in the first moment of going through the formalities of introduction, I got the feeling of a warm and friendly atmosphere. Everyone seemed to react pleasantly on every one else. This made me feel complacent. "I started up an endless chain of kindly feelings.

"It is a real delight to meet friends of whom Anne has spoken so pleasantly," said Virginia, establishing her attitude by the use of my given name. "I'm going to remove myself promptly and tactfully"—

"Truly and wantonly," broke in Park (repress.bly

Virginia smiled, and overrode him with:

"Promptly and tactfully, as I was saying, Mr. Parkinson. And will you deny me when I add that I'm doing it so you can get business out of the way all the sooner and be ready for an unstrammelled wit with my husband and me. We'll have tea ready at seven. But if you are ready to get acquainted earlier, there will be no complaints."

"I'm ready to skip being acquainted and be friends right this minute," declared Park as from a Parkinson of a Harrison, and so quite without offense of impertinence. "I've visited your home before. That takes care of the preliminaries"

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a "friend indeed," for you were a "friend in need." "—Mrs. GEORGE HARDEE, 1043 Byram St., Los Angles, California.

MAN AND MAID

By Elinor Glyn

WHAT could have kept Alathea?

I walked to the glass soberly when the doctors had gone, eager to get away and join the rejoicers. And what I saw startled me. How astonishing the art of these things is now! Unless it turn my glance in some impossible way I have apparently two bright blue eyes, with the same lids and lashes, the scrap of shrapnel only injured the orb itself, and did not touch the lid, fortunately, and the socket had heeled up miraculously in the last month. I am not now a disgusting object. Perhaps, possibly —Yes, can I induce her to love me soon?

But what is the good of it all? She has not returned, and now something must be done.

But on this day of days no one could be found to attend to anything! Shops were shut, post-offices did not work. The city was mad with rejoicing.

At luncheon I ate—gulped down my food. Burton's calm reassured me.

"You don't think anything has happened, do you Burton?"

"No, Sir Nicholas, Her Ladyship is no doubt with her family."

The hours went by, the shouting grew louder, as bands passed on their way to the Champs Elysees to see the cannon, which I heard were now dragged there. Burton came in from time to time to tell me the news, gathered from the concierge below.

The agony grew and grew. I went frantically into her room again, and looked on the dressing table. The ring cases were in a drawer, but no rings. No, if she had not meant to return she would have left them behind her.

Of course, the crowd has prevented her returning. There would be great difficulty in getting back from Auteuil.

At last, when I had been pacing like a restless tiger, and twilight was coming, I sank into my chair overcome with the pain.

A sense of forsakedness held me. Perhaps I dozed, because I was worn out, when suddenly I was conscious of a closing door, and opening my eye, I saw that Alathea stood before me.

A log fell and blazed brightly, and I could see that her face was greatly moved.

"I am so sorry if you have been anxious—Burton says you have. I would have been back earlier but I was caught in the crowd."

I reached out and turned on the lamp near me, and when she saw my eye and leg, she fell upon her knees at my side.

"Oh! Nicholas," she cried brokenly, and I put out my hand and took her hand.

* * * *

What a thing is joy!

My heart beat madly, the blood rushed in my veins. What a noise I heard in my ear beyond the shouting in the street?

Was it the cooing which used to haunt my dreams? Yes it was. And Alathea's voice was murmuring in French:

"Pardon, pardon, j'etais at bien ingrat—Pardonnez moi—Hein?"

I wanted to whisper:

"Darling, you have returned—nothing matters any more," but I controlled myself. She must finally surrender first!

"Nicholas, I have heard from my mother of your great generosity. You had helped us without ever telling me, and then paid again, to stop my mother's anxiety, and again to stop mine. Oh! I am ashamed; forgive me, I ask you to from my heart."

"I have nothing to forgive, child. Come, let us sit down and talk everything over," and I sank into the sofa and she came beside me.

She would not look at me, however, but her little face was gentle and shy. "I cannot understand, though, why you did all that. I cannot understand anything about it all. You do not love me. You only wanted me for your secretary, and yet you paid over a hundred thousand francs! The generosity is great."

"And you hate me," I said, "and let me love you, so that you could save your family. Your sacrifice was immense."

Suddenly she looked straight up at me, her eyes filled with passion, so that wild fire kindled in my blood.

"Nicholas—I do not hate you."

"I took both her hands and drew her to me, while outside in the street they were singing the Marseillaise and yelling for joy.

Ah! God! The bliss of the next few moments with her soft lips pressed to mine!

Afterwards, I grew masterful and ordered her to recount to me everything from the very beginning.

Yes, she had been attracted by me from the first day, but she hated the frinds I had around me, and she did not like the aimlessness of my life.

"Whenever I used to be growing too contemptuous though, Nicholas, I used to remember the V. C., and then the feeling went off."

She caressed my hair.

"I adore thick hair, Nicholas," she whispered, "but now you have had enough flattery! I am off to dress!"

She struggled and pretended she wanted to leave me, but I would not let her go.

"Only when I pleased and at a price! I want to show you that you have a husband who in spite of a wooden leg and a glass eye is a powerful brute!"

"I love you—strong like that" she cooed, her eyes soft with passion again. "I am not good really—or austere—or cold."

And I knew it was true as she paid the toll!

We went out on the balcony and stood there and sang and cheered with the crowds, as they swept on towards the Arc de Triomphe, and gradually a delirious intoxication held us both, and I drew her back.

"Lover!" she whispered as she melted into my arms—and all I answered was , "Soul of Mine."

And now I know what the whole of those verses mean!

THE END.

Reflex Radio Receivers on Exhibition

TWO reflex radio receivers, perfected by two different Boston engineers, are on display for the first time at the Boston Radio Show at Mechanics Hall.

The reflex idea, which bids fair to steal some of the honors hitherto held by Armstrong's super-regenerative, consists in the use of the same tube for both audio-frequency and radio-frequency amplification. Detection may be by means of an additional vacuum tube, or more generally by a crystal, which is said to result in less distortion.

William H. Priess of Belmont, formerly chief engineer for the Wireless Specialty Company, and now engineer for the DeForest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company in New Jersey, was the first to announce the invention of a reflex receiver. The idea was being experimented with by the United States army during the war, and Priess was then engaged in perfecting the receiver.

Recently the Wireless Specialty Co. laid claims to the receiver under the terms of a contract between them and Preiss, according to the latter. Preiss resigned his position, and secured an injunction enjoining the company from disclosing the principles and design of the receiver at the present radio show and elsewhere, although the company is permitted to exhibit and operate such a receiver.

Under the terms of an agreement with Priess, the Acme Apparatus Co. of Cambridge is also displaying similar receivers.

The DeForest Co., however, will have the chief right to sell the reflex receiver invented by Priess, it is stated. Such a receiver is displayed at the show. It has three tubes and a crystal rectifier, embodying three stages of radio and two of audio-frequency amplification. The crystal is ingeniously arranged inside the cabinet with external means of adjustment. There are fewer controls than on the super-regenerative. A collapsible loop antenna fits on the top of the cabinet, although an ordinary antenna may be used.

Working independently of Priess, Harold Tyzzer, engineer for the American Radio and Research Corporation, has produced a reflex receiver, which will be placed on the market at once. One of the receivers is displayed at the show at the Amrad booth. This receiver has a single tube, which is used for both audio and radio-frequency amplification. A crystal supplies the rectification.

One of the features of this is a magnet-held cat-whisker for the crystal. A small U-magnet holds the cat-whisker against the crystal, and a single thumb-screw permits the adjustment.

7:00 p. m.—Musical program by the "North Shore Festival Orchestra" of Beverly, Mass. Harry Van Sternburg, piano; Russell B. Wallace, violin; George L. Janotta, saxaphone; Donald P. Mayberry, cornet; Joseph McEnaily, trombone; George T. Worth, drums. Selections to be announced by radiophone.

The Silent Hour

The experiment of silent hour will be given its second trial next Tuesday evening between 9:00 and 10:00 p. m., when WGI will stand by. This is for the purpose of allowing those with good sets to pick up the more distant stations. Comments of radio listeners in on the new plan are invited by the Amrad Co.

Radio Charges

Messages may now be sent to London and Germany by radio at a charge only slightly in excess of postage, according to an announcement by the Radio Corporation of America. The rate now is 6 cents a word, with no minimum requirement.

To Give "Alda"

The entire first act of the opera "Alda" will be broadcast on next Saturday evening by station KDKA at East Pittsburg. Several noted singers will take the principal parts, and a chorus of sixty voices will assist.

Storage Battery

What is probably the largest high-voltage lead storage battery in the world is located in the Bureau of Standards radio laboratory at Washington. This battery weighs 2,000 pounds, and is capable of supplying an E.M.F. of 1,760 volts and an eight-hour discharge rate of about .5 ampheres. It contains 880 cells.

The Thirteen-Year-Old Boy

By W. A. McKeever

MANY parents fail to recognize and to give expression to the profound inner reorganization characteristic of the thirteen-year-old boy. They do not realize that now is the time to wean him from his baby ways and to cut off from the child-dependence hitherto a part of his normal life.

The very disturbing case of a big 130-pound baby boy has just been brought to my attention requesting a remedy. He is not yet thirteen, is much overgrown and he runs to his mother crying for sympathy when the other boys treat him rough. What would you do for him?

The negative personality of the soft, timid youth does not merely happen, but can be traced to a definite cause, namely, too much coddling and pampering; too much doing for him and not enough doing for himself; too much cossing and not enough blazing his own trail. Reverse the cause and you will have the cure.

The future worth of a boy depends not a little on the way he is handled during the period of twelve to fourteen, when soft methods must by all means be discarded. A program of positive, independent and agressive activities for his daily conduct will gradually put stamina into the negative youth.

Assign him at some rough, part-time employment. If necessary, and for the sake of his character, you must insist some sort of manual labor for him. During vacation, make it a steady job requiring three or four hours per day. The hard muscular tissues thus derived will add courage and self-reliance to the personality.

Treat him a bit rough about the house, addressing him as if he were an adult. Have him wait on himself all the time and his mother frequently. Give him a plain hard bed, discontinuing all his baby foods and his baby ways at the din ng table.

Ignore his "hurts" and his oversensitive feelings. For the sake of results, show little sympathy for his imagined injuries and not on the part of his playmates. They will stop making him the "goat" whenever he sees fit to quit his baby ways. The soft twelve-year-old is usually far stronger than he thinks himself to be. Plan to have him use his strength with commendable effect until he acquires physical self-reliance.

Get him into a business of his own. That is, your twelve-year-old son should be learning thrift along with his industry. Allow definite wages for certain regular required tasks. Teach him from the start to keep h's own account with debits and credits shown in detail. Have him learn to carry a savings account covering a part of his earnings. Have him learn to carry a small amount of loose change in his pockets, and to make his own small purchases.

Thus through a system of sanity managed affairs you may work the "milksop" al out of the character of your adolescent boy and change him into an enthusiastic, aggressive doer of manly deeds and pursuer of manly ideals. Do it, and so deprive the adult society of the future of one of its possible dependents.

Only two days more and this key is yours!

for you and your family to use

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

The Rude Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man to whom I was introduced to a few days before school graduation. I sent him an invitation to attend the exercises but he ignored it.

I met him at a dance since. He asked me to dance with him and I refused. Is it not his place to explain and offer an apology? G. J.

MAIL has been known to go astray. Evidently the young man asked you to dance in all good faith and you were deliberately rude. Since you don't know that he ever received your invitation, why did you sit in judgment on him? And even granted that he blundered, was the situation made any better by your rudeness? Cultivate a gracious, friendly manner. You will be happier so and you'll find yourself dowered with far more friends.

A Serious Omission

From Chicago comes the information that New York's horse population has increased 100 per cent. in five years. They say nothing, however, about horse sense.

BANISH ILL HEALTH

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

MANY fundamental departures from normal health are frequently masked by disturbances which claim all the attention of the sufferers. Instead of attacking the underlying cause of their troubles, these folks devote an enormous amount of energy to what might be called side issues. A few illustrations will serve to illuminate our point.

Thus it is futile to consume tonics if one's fatigue is due to weak feet. The thing to do is to treat the cause and not the effect.

Back of a vast number of complaints is a state of malnutrition. This may be due to faulty diet, to defective teeth or to bad hygienic habits of one sort or another. Hence one fritters away valuable time and energy trying to relieve headaches, frequent colds, digestive disturbances, etc., instead of altering the fundamental defect.

Alcohol gained an undue vogue in the abatement of troublesome symptoms because of its narcotic and anesthetic properties, while at the same time grevious, but curable ailments were ignored. The one-time great popularity of certain nostrums was due in large part to their high alcoholic content.

—Bind—
Resinol
over that cut and see how it heals

Little cuts and scratches are aggravating and painful, and they can even become dangerous if infected. Prevent such a condition by cleansing the injured spot well, and then applying RESINOL OINTMENT. Its gentle antiseptic balsams soothe while they heal. A physician's prescription, and recommended widely,—it is no longer an experiment to thousands who have used it successfully for various skin affections. At all druggists.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

The incidents of this kind happened in more big plants throughout the country there would be better relations between bosses and men.

Since the days of the founder of the Pullman Company, its heads have not been practical men familiar with how to run machinery or the like. The other day the company's new president, E. P. Carry, was in the works, and while inspecting a rather important job, remarked that it could be done better by doing it in a different way, which he briefly outlined.

A hearty workman overheard Mr. Carry's comments and remarked, in a tone of intense amazement, to one of his co-workers:

"Understands machinery, too!"

I have just run into C. E. Steffey the brilliant and indefatigable commander-in-chief of the National Cash Register's army of salesmen, and he declares that October was the best October in the company's long history and was also the biggest business month of the year.

I was particularly glad to learn that the company has been reducing prices on numbers of its machines and not attempting to boost prices.

This will interest those who are always eager to note when a big man's son shapes up as his dad's successor. Frederick B. Patterson, the only son of the late John H. Patterson, and who took over the presidency of the N. C. R. not very long ago, headed the party of officials conducting the conventions, but when Mr. Patterson received word while he was on the Pacific Coast that Dayton could hope to retain McCook aviation field only if $350,000 or $400,000 were raised to provide the Federal government with necessary land, he immediately jumped on the train, threw himself whole-heartedly into the raising of this large sum, and carried the job through to success.

New York likes to claim it has the biggest this and the biggest that in the world. Well, New York hasn't the biggest of the visiting men's association in the world. Chicago has that.

When I went to address the members at luncheon I was astonished to find an attendance of something like five hundred. There wasn't a vacant seat in the whole place.

Happily, it wasn't a one-man affair. After my talk, any one was at liberty to ask questions. I couldn't but note that the nearest the Atlantic one treated it, or perhaps becomes the interest in what's what and what's likely to be what in Europe.

It would look as if a college education and the packing business don't go hand in hand. Horace O. Wetmore, who is the free-wire president of the First National Bank of Chicago, has just left the sophomore class at the University of Wisconsin to start work as a herder in the stock yards here.

J. Ogden Armour didn't finish college, so he also was anxious to get into grips with the packing business.

Louis F. Swift, now head of the largest packing business in the world, wanted to get into the cattle pens as soon as he graduated from grade school, but his father compromised by agreeing not to send Louis to college if he would stick until he completed the high school course.

Thomas E. Wilson is another leading packer who didn't go through college.

My recollection is Eddie Morris also was so much in love with the work at the stock yards that his likewise didn't stay at school long enough to earn a college diploma.

To those of us on the outside, the stock yards do not appear particularly attractive, but somehow they seem to get into the blood of the packers' sons and lure them away from school and college at an early age.

I'm now headed for Columbus, the home of the wonderful Ohio State University, with a student body of some 8,000, and the home also of the greatest stadium in America.

Some of the other things Columbus has and has I hope to tell about later.

Copper Group Strong in New York Market Weakened by Wide Profit-Taking

CHILE ADVANCES TO NEW HIGH FOR YEAR

The copper group was strong in a New York week-end market weakened by wide profit-taking and selling to reduce commitments in view of the stock market holiday on Tuesday, Election Day. Chile established a new high for 1922.

New hope for the year were also made by May Stores, Mathieson Alkali and Dome Mines.

COPPERS BID UP.

The resumption of profit-taking in some issues coincident with the bidding up of others gave the stock market an irregular appearance.

In red metal shares, which have been lagging behind the rest of the list, gains of 1 to 2¾ points were recorded in Anaconda, Chile, Cerro de Pasco, Utah, Kennecott and Federal Mining & Smelting.

Merchandising shares also were in good chance, associated dry goods breaking throughs to a new high record for the year and Gimbel Brothers preferred making moderate gains.

Some improvements was noted in Standard Oil issues but Mexican Petroleum was reactionary.

STUDEBAKER OFF.

Studebaker, which enjoyed a brisk advance Friday on announcement of higher automobile prices, slumped nearly 2 points and Chandler yielded slightly in sympathy.

Independent steels also were heavy, Crucible dropping 1¾ points.

News developments continued favorable, with weekly reviews on trade conditions reporting active movement of merchandise from manufacturing points. Wholesalers in many lines of business are reporting one difficulty, that of getting sufficient merchandise to meet orders.

Copper Liens Up and Liberty Bonds Higher

In the New York bond market a sharp advance in Copper Company liens and renewed strength and activity of U. S. government issues were outstanding developments.

Chile Copper 6s rose 2 points and the 7s 2⅜, while Cerro de Pasco 8s improved 1⅜.

Liberty 3½s advanced 20 cents on $100 and the gains in the 4¼ series ranged from 4 to 30 cents. Foreign bonds showed slight improvement.

SHOE INDUSTRY IN BROAD EXPANSION

Each week notes still further improvement in general business conditions. More machinery is steadily getting into motion and less unemployment is evident throughout the country.

Buyers who have withheld commitments for over a year are again coming into the market with confidence for substantial amounts of goods. There is less haggling over prices. It is recognized that there is a dearth of goods in many lines and that further delay is likely to mean replacement at higher cost.

Expanding operations in the shoe industry as illustrated by the receipt of orders for 1,400,000 pairs of shoes by the Endicott-Johnson Company, the largest week in the company's history, show the broadening tendency of general business. Dealers are showing signs of haste in covering raw materials and further advances in leather seem likely.

75 P. C. DIVIDEND NEAR ON GAS STOCK

Special meeting of stockholders of Union Natural Gas Co. has been called for November 28 at Pittsburgh to vote on proposal to increase authorized stock from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 and to reduce par value from $100 to $25. Announcement was also made of intention to declare a stock dividend of 75 per cent.

DIVIDEND INCREASE BY CLOTHING FIRM

Hart, Schaffner & Marx, clothing firm, declared quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent on common stock, payable November 29 to stock of record November 18. Previously company had been paying 1 per cent, quarterly.

AMERICAN WOOLEN OPERATIONS GAIN

Expansion of American Woolen operations has been noted in recent weeks and at the present time the system is functioning at well over 90 per cent capacity, little over a fortnight ago the average was in the low 80s.

Wall St. Gossip

STANDARD OIL of New Jersey is unquestionably in position to pay increased dividends out of its earnings. It has paid same rate since 1910.

ASSOCIATED DRY GOODS, now earning around $10 a share, has the good Christmas season ahead, and is expected to be lively mover in the market from time to time.

PACIFIC OIL'S dividend is seen as safe by many because it is argued Calif. Standard would regard it as bad policy to pass the payment at this time.

AMERICAN CAN will declare 5 per cent. dividend on common, according to Stock Exchange belief.

FEDERAL MINING & Smelting Company, owned by the Guggenheims, is expected to raise its preferred dividend from 5 per cent. to the full 7 per cent. and then to give consideration to paying up the 18% per cent. accrued dividends.

PITTSBURGH STEEL COMPANY, for quarter ended September 30, reports gross sales $5,581,129, increase of $1,952,340 over same period, 1921. After deductions there was a deficit of $9,688.

ADAMS EXPRESS dividend action has been put over until the December meeting.

CONTINENTAL CAN is expected to show earnings of around $20 a share on common, contrasting with $3.75 last year. New dividend is expected to be 7 per cent.

ERIE'S continued poor showing in September proved no partial surprise, and improvement from now on can be expected.

MAY DEPARTMENT STORES directors meet November 7 when interesting dividend action is looked for.

STUDEBAKER is still favorably considered for extra dividends and interests that sold a few days ago have been buying stock back.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY'S recent $1,500,000 investment in Llallagua Mines of Bolivia has appreciated 17 per cent. in last six weeks, despite drop in Chilean issues.

W. E. HUTTON & CO.—Bullish activities in specialties are expected to continue. Would suggest profit taking on bulges.

LIVINGSTON & CO.—It would not be strange if a "sidewise" movement resulted until after election. Buy stocks on minor reactions now.

RED METALS IN BOSTON ARE HIGHER

Red metal shares sold higher at the week-end session on the Boston Stock Exchange. The market was firm.

Anaconda added 2 points and Ahmeek 1. Gains of fractions showed in Copper Range, Old Dominion, North Butte and Utah.

Railroads were heavy, Boston & Maine and New Haven selling a shade lower.

There was strength in the packing group. Swift International lifted more than a point and Swift & Co. had a gain.

United Fruit, United Shoe and Greenfield Tap & Die were a bit higher.

Edison and Mexican Investment sold somewhat lower.

Pacific Mills took on a point.

There was a 2-point gain for Isle Royale.

What Fitzgerald Has Done

His Accomplishments in Public Office Make Fine Record for Democratic Candidate

John F. Fitzgerald, Democratic nominee for Governor, was asked what he had done which distinguished him as a man of initiative, as a constructive man, as a doer, from a talker, a promiser. We publish herewith his offhand reply and ask you if you can beat it:

I did these things while I was Mayor. They talked about widening Avery street for years, extending Arlington street into Park square and widening Pleasant street. These were the three important street problems in Boston for twenty-five years. I put them all through. They talked about an addition to City Hall for twenty-five years. I built the City Hall Annex. I trebled the capacity of Park street station. Not one foot of station has been added to it since. Under my administration the Dorchester tunnel was built, the Boylston street subway and the extension to Cambridge street. Not one foot has been built since I got out of office. I built the Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common, the Zoo and the Aquarium, the Consumptives' Hospital, making Boston the first city in the country to have a tuberculosis hospital.

I spoke in every big city of the United States, in all the big cities of Europe and in South America. I put Spanish into the schools. I am ahead of any city in the country. I was the impetus to Harvard College in organizing the Harvard business administration. I was the first guarantor of the business administration course of Boston University.

I organized the first commercial school in Boston, the first industrial school with a Practical Arts School for girls. As a member of Congress I got the eight million dollars for Boston Harbor. I opened up the Charlestown Navy Yard, which had been closed for years. I put the bill before the congressional committee for the drydock and succeeded in getting it passed. I opened up the schoolhouses for public uses after school hours. I established the bureau of trial hygiene in the Health Department, reducing the deaths among babies substantially, putting success in the Health Department.

This is a mighty good show of performance. Mr. Fitzgerald will not down until he has forgotten how to accomplish things.

Death of Father Vaughan

A Hard Fighter

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Father Vaughan, a famous Jesuit priest, is dead in London. When he was over here a few years ago, dining with and entertaining his hostess, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, the older Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and others, he told one story about his brother, the Cardinal, that will appeal to all Americans that have visited English country houses.

The Cardinal, on his way north to dedicate a church, stopped over for the night at a nobleman's castle. He had with him all his robes, all insignia, everything necessary for the solemn dedication.

When he went upstairs to dress for dinner he found every trunk unpacked and everything that he had spread out on beds, chairs, tables. The trained English valet is a conscientious creature.

Father Vaughan was a very eloquent man, a good preacher, a hard fighter. The enemies he selected for his hardest attacks were Socialists, and Mormons especially. He also hated what Roosevelt called "race suicide" and despised birth control.

He warned England that she would need all the sons that her mothers could raise. The war proved that he was right.

Love Rumania and Europe

But Buy Bonds Cautiously

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

You learn from the government of Rumania that that admirable, friendly country cannot pay anything, principal or interest, on the thirty-eight million dollars borrowed from the United States—at least for the next four years. She hopes to begin paying then.

Rumania had a hard time, and this country was glad to oblige her and other countries when we were shovelling out our billions. What Rumania got was a very small amount—considering how easy it was.

However, Rumania, while saying that she cannot pay the GOVERNMENT OF AMERICA, is borrowing now from the CITIZENS of America with a bond issue. The United States can afford to postpone indefinitely the payment of thirty-eight millions. But let those that cannot afford postponement, or possibly repudiation some day, beware how they buy bonds of Central Europe.

Suppose Bolshevist Russia took over Rumania tomorrow, how much do you think the Rumanian bonds would be worth then?

Women Fear Equality?

With Their Votes They Can Protect Themselves

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Women, some of them, oppose what is called "blanket equality"; that is to say, giving men and women exactly the same rights before the law.

The ladies say that if blanket equality passed women might be forced to become policemen or soldiers. Or mothers might be deprived of protection against extreme industrial exploitation, etc.

That seems foolish. The law protects in his job the old soldier, or it is supposed to. The law can do whatever the people want it to do, and they will always want it to give women the protection that the interest of the human race demands for them. The public would no more think of permitting a woman with an unborn child to work all night in a factory than they would think of compelling a man to undertake the duties of a wet nurse.

Women should get all the rights they can without any fear of LOSING any of their FEW and SMALL privileges.

Now that they are able to vote, they will find politicians and lawmakers extremely polite—quite a change from the past, when dignified judges in the greatest State of the nation solemnly said it was against the Constitution to protect women from destructive industrial employment.

Opera Singer Dies

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

RITA FORNIA was one or the most useful members of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Just before the opening of another season, word came from Paris that she had died over there. The many thousands who have been gladdened by her artistry will miss this serviceable singer.

This is not written as a personal tribute, for we do not remember ever hearing her. But it is offered to share with the readers the inspiration gained from reading the newspaper's story of her life.

"Fornia" was chosen as the artist's professional name, out of love for the Californian whose devoted daughter she was.

When Patti came to San Francisco, young Rita Newman, whose vocal promise had already been discovered, was fired with ambition to emulate that golden-throated diva.

Her father yielded to her entreaties. She studied in New York, Berlin, Paris. Returning to America, she joined the strenuous school of experience in an opera company singing in English.

And here we come to the point of our story. That was a season when Grippo was lord of health and conversation in our land. Let Rita Fornia speak for herself a bit.

"All the sopranos and contraltos had the grip but me. One night I was announced to sing Elizabeth in 'Tannhauser.' The member who was supposed to sing Venus was indisposed; so I sang both roles. I changed my wig after alluring Tannhauser and became a noble woman.

"In the last act I changed my wig again, slipped a pink silk dress over my Elizabeth robes, and again became Venus. It was an exciting evening for me."

Unless one happens to learn somewhat of the details of struggle and effort, handicap and difficulty, of concentration and devotion which go towards the making of the masterful successes, we are likely to deceive ourselves about them. Mastery always seems so simple as to be absurd.

In acclaim, recognition, money, it is worth all that it wins, because mastery is practically always earned through character, imagination, wish, will, and work.

Unless you have tried it yourself, you are not likely to know how much of self-driven drudgery is involved in the "sure touch" that finally spells Success.

Stay at Home

Editor Boston American:

In answer to Lillian, I would advise her to give up her foolish dreams of the stage and stick to her parents and her happy home. I am not saying this on account of the many alleged pitfalls that are supposed to surround the theatre, but simply because comfortable homes are not to be lightly left, and without training the path to success before the footlights is hard and long. Think well, Lillian, before you leave your parents for something that dazzles from afar but few reach with safety.

Landlord Problem

Editor Boston American:

Rents are being merrily raised about town, with the old cry of no coal, or, at least, high-priced coal. It doesn't take much for the landlords to put on the dollars, especially in large tenements. I know of a young man and his wife with two children and another expected who are in a back apartment that has not been repaired for years. There is no washbowl in the rooms and face and hands, as well as baby clothes, have to be washed in the sink, which is also used for the dishes. His rent is raised to seven dollars a week. He will probably have to move. The solution of the landlord problem is far from solved by any existing commission.

Coal Situation

Editor Boston American:

Cannot something be done to remedy this coal situation? We live in a three-flat house in Roxbury and our heat is supplied by the landlord, but he can only get soft coal. In this case, the landlord lives in the house and attends to the furnace himself. We are not blaming him, but why cannot he purchase the hard coal and get results from it? The soft coal requires constant attention and the fire is often out, leaving the house cold.

Judge Reunited Aged Couple

By Winifred Black

HE'S sixty-five, and she's sixty, and they've quarreled.

Quarreled very bitterly—all about nothing.

She likes the motion pictures, and he hates them.

He likes to read history, and she to read novels, and at the garden gate where she wanted to plant syringias, he wanted to plant lilacs, blue and white. Instead of red geraniums at the kitchen door, he insisted upon hydrangeas—and every day they argue about it.

And one day she told him she never had liked him, anyway—no, not for forty years, never a minute since the time he made her cook a hot dinner one hot Sunday when his mother and father and two uncles "happened in," unexpectedly.

And he told her he was glad to hear it because he'd never had a particle of use for her since she read a trashy novel and let the prune jelly burn right before her face and eyes, thirty-three years ago next Fall.

And he slammed out of the house and went to see his relations, and his relations told him they didn't see how he had put up with it so many years—burning jelly and reading novels, and now this "movie" fad.

And so poor old sixty-five went home and got his trunk and settled down to live with his relations. He's a well-to-do man in a small way and can live wherever he pleases, and when he dies, of course, somebody will inherit his property.

It shouldn't be his wife—no, he was bound and determined she wouldn't have the place and all the acres. She'd just turn it into a flower garden and marry some smooth-tongued nobody before John had been in his grave six months.

And when Sixty heard that about the property and the smooth-tongued stranger she went to court and applied for letters of guardianship.

She said she'd worked and saved for forty years and she wasn't going to have a lot of designing relations cheat her out of everything at the last minute.

And what do you think happened? The judge was a human being as well as a judge, and he sent for the husband and the wife, together, and he had a good, plain talk with them in his own chambers, and in about ten minutes, out they walked, arm in arm, on their way to the "movies."

SEEN AND HEARD

FOLLOWING the theft of four of his automobiles, FRANK STEVENS of Malden has had a large sign printed and placed in the rear of his Sedan: "Please do not take this car without permission. This means you." Out of the four machines which have been stolen in an equal number of weeks, only one has been recovered.

Nineteen religious denominations are represented in the Boston University School of Theology, according to DR. WILLIAM J. LOWSTUTTER, registrar. This is a banner year for the school, as up to date 390 pupils have registered, making this year the largest in point of registration in the history of the school.

Reports from Washington show a bank failure for every day in the year. Three hundred and twenty-eight were either State or private, while the remainder (37) were national banks. Since the advent of the national bank system, creditors have received anywhere from 79 to 83 per cent. of their liabilities.

When workmen erected the new traffic signs in Malden square they did not realize that they had placed them in the wrong positions. The signs were placed as follows: The Medford sign sent motorists to Wakefield, and the Wakefield sign directed to Medford. The Lynn sign sent motorists in the direction of Everett, and so on. One motorist went to Wakefield when he wanted to get to Medford.

A wide variety of vocations is represented among the candidates seeking the office of Mayor of Everett. HOWARD FURNESS, ex-representative, is a real estate dealer. EX-MAYOR JOHN J. MULLIN is a plumber, and DR. L. D. CHISHOLM is a dentist. CHRISTOPHER HARRISON, who resigned to become town manager of Lexington, was a civil engineer.

Death of THOMAS NELSON PAGE, author and diplomat, is mourned by scores in New England with whom he established personal friendship, particularly townsfolk at York Harbor, Me., where he had a magnificent Summer home he named "Rockledge," near that of his son-in-law, the novelist, JOHN FOX, JR.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON THE HOROSCOPE

By Garrett P. Serviss.

I RECEIVED the other day a letter, the name and address of whose writer I withhold, for obvious reasons, which runs in part as follows:

"I wish to have a horoscope read'ng and enclose P. O. money order for one. I was born in ——, on December 2, 1886, at 1—2 p. m. What does a reading of the stars reveal for the future in matrimonial and business affairs? I have made the acquaintance of a girl born in Augusta, August 14, 1893. What do the stars reveal in regard to her, past and future?"

Accompanying the letter was a postoffice money order for two dollars. It would seem, then, that this must be the modern price of a horoscope, but if so horoscopes have gone low down, for there was a time when they were worth a king's ransom. The money order has been returned to its sender, not because it was too little, but because even a cent would have been too much.

What I have ever done or said that could induce anybody to suppose that I practice astrological divination, I do not know. I am somewhat chagrined, on the other hand, to meet with such evidence that all that I have written on this subject during many years has still left me open to the imputation of being an astrologer!

It is true that there was a time when astrology and astronomy were virtually synonymous terms, but to confuse them in this age and in a land of professedly universal education is a result of ignorance. It is no excuse to recall the fact that Kepler and Tycho Brahe sometimes cast horoscopes. They did not fully believe in them, and in their day astronomy had learned nothing about the heavenly bodies beyond their movements and positions in the sky, and it was mainly the combinations formed by the planets with one another and with the stars, during their ceaseless revolutions and occasional retrogradations, that brought to birth the astrological superstition.

Historically and psychologically astrology is very interesting. As an entertaining amusement it may be attractive to those who like to feel the thrill of apparent mystery. But scientifically and as a practical means of reading character or forecasting events, it is misleading and worthless.

"What does a reading of the stars reveal for the future in matrimonial and business affairs?" asks the writer of the letter from which I have quoted.

I reply that such a "reading" reveals nothing whatever of the future of either matrimonial or business ventures—though I am not sure that I ought, in view of recent social developments, to make any distinction between matrimony and business.

There would seem to be much of the shrewd caution of the business mind in an effort to find out from babbling stars what a girl's past has been, and future is to be. Even if I were an astrologer, I hope my only reply to such a question would be: "Find out for yourself through your own shrewdness; the stars are spies only for empires."

For those who still can be fooled, or fool themselves, by horoscopes, it may be well to point out, as I have elsewhere, This is done in order that the inquirer is careful to give, as near as he can, the moment, as well as the day and year, of birth. This is done in order that the astrologer may fix accurately the "aspect" of the heavenly bodies at that instant. But this he cannot do, for the exact moment of birth is an indeterminate datum.

In the vast majority of cases it is not noted at all, and never with a thousandth part of the accuracy that would be demanded in an astronomical observation.

FLOATING CHURCHES FOR THE CHINESE

By Edna Lee Booker

CANTON, Nov. 4.—Floating churches where religious services are held, floating schools and dispensaries, are features of the missionary work carried on by the South China Boat Mission among the thousands of Chinese who live on house boats in South China.

Canton has perhaps the largest boat population of any city in the world, as there are 84,000 boats of every description registered in the office of the Harbor Commissioner. This represents approximately 400,000 people.

The South China Boat Mission began its work on the boat people in 1909, and the work has grown until at the present there are eight gospel boats supported by the mission in the Kwanting Province. Five of these boats operate at Canton, one at Kongmoon, one at Shinchow, and one at Yingtak. In Canton church services are held every Sunday morning as well as through the week, on the gospel boats, which weave their way through the labyrinth of boats of every description.

A small boat is used as a dispensary and under the direction of a Chinese physician, while another boat is converted into a boarding school for boys and another into a school for girls. The boat schools must be boarding schools, as the boat people move about constantly, and the pupils could not attend regularly otherwise. There are eighteen boys attending the boys' school and about the same number of girls enrolled in the boarding school for girls. There are also many day pupils.

The boat people are very clannish. They have a dialect of their own; they seldom go on land, do not mingle with the "land people," are very superstitious and are uneducated. Practically the only way in which the missionary can reach them is to secure a boat and go out and live among them.

There are boats of all descriptions. They include the sampans, which lie close to the water and are approximately fifteen feet long; the great junks, with their cargoes of grain, salt and lumber; the fishing boats, with their high sterns and pictures on their brown-colored patched sails; the boats with great eyes painted on their prows, in order that they may see, which ply between Canton and Ningpo, and the river cargo boats, with small cannons mounted on their sides for protection against the river pirates. As these boats carry silk, they are attacked frequently.

The sampans, which are some fifteen feet long and five feet wide, are the homes of families of six and seven people. The women, often with babies strapped to their backs or paying at their feet, row the majority of the boats, for the women are the workers in South China.

The headquarters of the South China Boat Mission is in Chicago, and the missionaries working among the boat people of China include the Rev. Edward Drew, the Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Winter and Miss Todhunter and Miss Moschinsky.
